The Colors of Our Lives

Famous Author Robert Fulghum once said, "We could learn a lot from crayons; some are sharp, some are pretty, some are dull, while others are bright, some have weird names, but they all have learned to live together in the same box." Students have learned this lesson. Though all of the students came from different spectra of the color wheel and saw the world in a different light, they were able to work together in sports, clubs, and the classroom to make THS a better school. Whether they were cheering in the stands, decked out in patriotic ORANGE and BLACK, ROSY cheeked from giving a game all they had, or a bit GREEN while looking at the cafeteria lunches, the colors of our lives blend together to form one united school.

Dedication

This school year was an interesting one. It began with the ORANGE t-shirts and face paint of the Homecoming festivities. Classes worked together to make floats, improve the girls' football skills, and show their spirit in the Jungle. Students' faces were different shades of RED from their enthusiastic cheering. The year progressed quietly until it was disturbed by the GREEN skies that warned of a tornado. The students clamored down the stairs into the designated safety spots and waited for the storm to pass. Though they were thankful that destruction was avoided, some were a bit BLUE when told that they would not be sent home for the day. As the days flew by, the GREEN grass gave way to a WHITE blanket of snow. The winter was a harsh one, and the students enjoyed numerous snow days including a three-day cancellation due to a nasty ice storm. The kids took advantage of the day off, and many had PINK cheeks after hours of sledding. After a while, the students (and teachers) had had enough of the chilly temperatures and were elated when the snow receded and little YELLOW dandelions started popping up. But news of budget cuts and schedule changes had some students' faces on the verge of turning PURPLE. Then came Prom with an "Under the Sea" theme that had everyone dancing under the BLUE bubbles of a beautifully created "ocean." The excitement died down for a little after that, but at graduation, the seniors proudly turned their ORANGE tassels to the other side and declared their entrance into the adult world. Throughout the year, the COLORS of our lives highlighted our most memorable moments and added spice to the school day.

Academics

Studying Hard and Discovering A Passion

THS prided itself on academic excellence. We continuously achieved the highest ACT scores in the county, and with the help of a great staff, many students were able to earn grades that were much higher than they expected. But that was not the most important part of the academic side of High School. It was also important to the school that its' students be able to find and pursue their passions. Whether it be in choir, band, orchestra, web design, art, photography, etc., the students were encouraged to go outside their comfort zones and explore something new. Teachers directed students to participate in extra-curricular activities such as National Art Honor Society, Jazz Band, T-Tones, and Media Club. It was this push that allowed students to blossom into talented individuals with the drive and the passion to chase their dreams.

The THS Experience

The Teachers Who Shaped

The THS staff played a large part in shaping the lives of their students. Whether it was a helping hand or a sharp admonition, the staff was always there to lead the students on their way to a higher education and fulfilling careers. Some of the most memorable members of the staff included Mr. Novak, Mr. Ferwerda, Mrs. Madgwick, and Mr. DeWeese. Mr. Novak kept his classes engaged with corny jokes and games of "Simon Says." The same old jokes had been working for years, and when he said, "Then I said to myself, "Self, . . ." the students would hang on every word. Mr. Ferwerda was also a teacher who knew how to entertain a crowd. His methane bubble experiments were always a favorite of the chemistry students. Having a teacher who could hold fire and not get burned was fascinating. Mrs. Madgwick was the teacher who was never afraid to broach a sensitive topic. In her AP Government class, the students often discussed the legal parameters of drugs, prostitution, and other interesting subjects. No child who left her classroom was sheltered from the real world, and they were better educated because of that. Mr. DeWeese was one of the most loved teachers at THS. He was very popular with the choir students and headed an all-male a capella group called T-Tones. THS was a school filled with dedicated teachers who were part of what made the THS experience so "colorful."

Foreign Exchange Students

Tecumseh High School was graced with the presence of multiple exchange students from all over the world. Luisa Moek, Martinas Akstinas, Mathias Renz, Carlos Heredia-Ruiz, Dennis VanBalen, and Jacques Strohschein traveled from afar to embark on American life. The various reasons for their travels differ, but all of them have ended up here, in this little town of Tecumseh, to better their English and to experience our day-to-day life.

Customs were a shock to some. Luisa shared that the holidays are similar but are celebrated slightly differently, which comes as no surprise. She also says that back home in Germany, she was not accustomed to attending school dances such as the holiday dance or prom. Common events like these are second nature to us here in America; it's interesting to learn that it's new territory to others.

Overall, the exchange students bring bright personalities to the hallways at school. Their host families can agree that they are full of spunk and enthusiasm for their new-found experiences. At first, many were shy and out of their comfort zone, shocker? But as the school year progressed, they grew out of their shells and developed bonds with many of the students here at THS.

1. Discovering new passions and sharing old ones.

2. Participating in school and after-school activities.

3. Hanging out with new friends and second families.

Clubs & Organizations

After School Achievement

The Clubs and Organizations at THS were what really gave the student body character. Whether they wanted to expand their knowledge of math, science, art, robotics, or make a difference in their community, students had the opportunity to join a club that would help them to do so. Some students even went as far as to revive clubs that had previously died out. Marissa Martin and Allie Merritt re-founded the S.A.D.D. club and organized an entire day dedicated to preventing destructive decisions on Prom night. Other clubs such as NHS volunteered at community events like Tour de Tecumseh, which sponsored the Community Arts of Tecumseh. Ambition and selflessness are two of the reasons that the THS Indians not only improved themselves, but also improved the community around them.

Summing it all up . . . Equations

Playing Mind Games

Equations is a competitive club in which students play math-based games in meets. The Equations team was very successful this year and won every meet. Mrs. Shepherd was the coach and advisor for the club. Jacob Kelley and Andrew Kruse were the top players over the entire season, with Kelley ahead by just one point. The team was the best in the county, and they might possibly be the best in the state. It should come as no surprise as Kelley won the Trig-Star math competition for the state last year. Kruse has locked down at least four first place championships himself. The team that competes for the championships is Team One, comprised of Kelley, Kruse, Taylor Robinson, Justin Monahan, and Tom Craig.

Naturally, the team had to practice before they could compete. They took time from Seminar to brush up on their skills, and occasionally they goofed off, too. "My favorite part of practice is probably seeing how far we can push Mrs. Shepherd before she freaks out on us," Kruse jokes.

Luckily, the team is good enough that they can joke around for a while before they actually practice. This shows how talented our school is in the math department. Those who were willing to take time out of their day to play a math game proved themselves to be dedicated math students.

The Equations students showed off their smarts this year, and along the way they were able to win a few tournaments.

Fellowship of Christian Athletes

Coming together for Christ

FCA stands for Fellowship of Christian Athletes. This club was run by five students: Madison Mills, Tyler Bryan, Caleb Hughes, Merissa McClure, and Stephen Bilotta. Mr. Linde was the advisor. The club's motto was 2 Timothy 4:17 which reads, "But the Lord stood at my side and gave me strength, so that through me the message might be fully proclaimed and all the Gentiles might hear it."

Mills said, "We know that we can't do anything by ourselves, because without God we are nothing. He gives us strength, and it is our job to make disciples of all nations and give the glory to Him, so this is why we thought this verse was so important this year as we're striving to share the gospel and live our faith out loud here at THS."

Every meeting consisted of a fun game or skit, a lesson, a video, and small group time.

This year at the first football game, FCA helped serve pizza and pop to the THS staff for their "tailgate." On September 22, 2010, FCA hosted the event "See You at the Pole." They joined millions of students around the world for the "Global Day of Student Prayer" as they stood around the flag pole.

Their focus was to pray for the school year, the teachers, their peers, the government, or any other prayer requests. FCA also hosted their 2nd annual 5k run/walk event on May 14. It was raining again this year, but they did not let that stop them. They had lots of prizes and t-shirts that were donated for them to give away from local businesses around town. All the money they earned went to the Maurice Spears Campus because they wanted to help other teens in the community.

Leaders on the Field and in the Community

The Varsity club's members were all participants in varsity sports or music groups. But that was not the only requirement for being in this organization. The members of Varsity Club were all leaders who took pride in helping their teams, their school, and their community, and that is what drove them to make a difference in the lives of others. Together they used their leadership skills to work on community service projects like cleaning public roads. It took a lot of bravery to rummage through all the garbage out there. The group also raked leaves throughout the community. The leaders of the club were Brooke Garner, Erica Steuwe, and Jenessa Steuwe. The trio managed the club quite well and kept everyone motivated to help their community and fellow students. The club made its members into better teammates and better citizens, and it also made Tecumseh a better place to live.

National Art Honor Society

National Art Honor Society (NAHS) was a club for art students who were passionate about art and their community. They volunteered at various events, such as the annual art exhibit here at THS. The president of the club was Victor Tran, and the advisors were Ms. Beagle and Mrs. Mensing. This year, due to changes in leadership, the club got a late start. This did not stop the club from reaching out to those interested in continuing their future in the art department.

Here at THS, there were many art classes to take as electives, something that not many other schools offered. The participants were required to have completed a year in an art class to become a member of NAHS, which was not hard to manage with all the options.

This year, members of NAHS helped organize the 50th annual Art Show. Their hard work and efforts were displayed, along with the artwork of many other high school students, in May.

The students involved in this club were very passionate about art. Tran said, "Art, for some people, is the reason they get up every day. It is much more than just a hobby; it is an entire lifestyle in which a person can express their emotion in something other than words."

Tran, along with the rest of the participants, were disappointed about the recent cuts to the art department, but they were very proud of the artwork that was displayed at the Art Show. Tran said, "Even though it was smaller than in previous years, the quality in the pieces shown were fantastic. The school can do all it wants to the art program, but it won't stop us students from creating incredible pieces of work. The best part was seeing all of the teachers' and students' reactions to all the work. It made me smile to see so many appreciate the work we put into our artwork..." and they sure deserved the success because they worked really hard. Tran said, "The process was a little stressful. The matting process and whatnot was rather irritating, and putting ceramic pieces into place was pretty nerve wracking due to the scare of breaking them. I did a lot of security and painted pedestals. It was not too bad, got to wander around and enjoy the artwork while still making sure visitors didn't do something they shouldn't have."

The group put a lot into their art and the show. They all loved promoting art and were happy to see others getting involved. Tran said, "My favorite piece was this simple pine cone drawn by a student from Art & Design. The intricate shadows and proportions were spectacular for an Art & Design freshman."

A Place for Acceptance and Support

Gay/Straight Alliance (GSA) was a newer club formed by Chelsea Pyzik in the 2009-2010 school year. Sophomore leaders Kendra King and Breeanne Breeding brought GSA to a new level. The club was described as "a safe haven for anyone and everyone that felt like coming to a meeting, either to talk about problems or to support others with their problems," by sophomore member Kailey Russell. Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Transgender (LGBT) students found themselves turning to GSA for guidance.

GSA touched on many historic LGBT topics, such as Harvey Milk, bullying, suicide, homophobia, and many others. This helped GSA members (LGBT or not) find themselves. GSA became a family environment. The participants felt safe and at "home," together. It helped many students out of really rough patches in their lives. Several members recalled the bullying meeting because every student could understand and relate to what they were saying. Breeding said, "You could feel the emotion in the room."

GSA provided new knowledge and comfort with meetings and support groups once a month. Several students talked about their own problems and experiences as LGBT with the members of GSA, who provided advice or an ear to listen to what they had to say. Sexual orientation can be a confusing thing as a teenager, and GSA was there to help students figure it out. When asked about her participation in the club, Russell sids, "As cheesy as it sounds, GSA helped me find out who I am."

Grim Reaper "Kills" 32 Students

The day before prom, Tecumseh High School's club, SADD (Students Against Destructive Decisions), hosted Grim Reaper Day, when students pretend to be the Grim Reaper and "kill" other students. This shows the high school how many teenagers die as a direct result of drunk driving. THS did an excellent job of showing what could happen. SADD enlisted a professional makeup artist to put makeup on the "dead" students to show how horrible these accidents can be, and they told the "dead" students not to talk for the rest of the day. THS also got a car that was involved in an accident caused by abusing drugs or alcohol and put it in front of the school so all students could see the consequences.

Marissa Martin was the president of SADD. The club did research on how many teenagers die each year from drunk driving or drug abuse. They had four Grim Reapers, one for each class. This year eight students died each period with a total of 32 students dying by the end of the day. The Grim Reaper walked around the school and went into classrooms to collect "victims." In B8, Holly Klauke was killed. She said, "It wasn't as hard because I got killed in B8, but I really missed my friends." Katie Martin was also killed. "It was hard. It was very difficult to have conversations and at lunch. You weren't allowed to sit by your friends, and it was very awkward sitting in silence and staring at each other." A lot of students thought it was hard because some of them took it seriously and did not talk. Others did not listen, and just kept talking throughout the day.

The real question is, did this change students perspective on drugs and alcohol? Some students said yes it did change their perspective. "Yes, it made me more aware of the dangers!" said Shelby Denham. Other says it was just pointless. "No, I don't do them so [my outlook] stayed the same," said Sumer Brown. Either way, some students were changed by it and made better decisions on prom night.

Experimentin' and Stuff

Science Olympiad

On Monday, January 10, twelve students came to school wearing medals, ribbons, and lab coats. Joy was obvious on their faces, for the highly awaited competition had come and gone over the weekend. This competition was Science Olympiad, a Tri-county contest that pits students' inventions, wits, and general knowledge against each other. The group of students had been meeting every few days in Mr. Harsh's room during the second half of Seminar, along with meeting outside of school to work on some of the more difficult events.

Although some might think the meeting would be boring, there was no shortage of fun ideas. The lab coat was a fun way to pass the last day. Everyone thanked Krystal Henry for purchasing the coats and bringing in the tie-dye. The colors made Tecumseh stick out in a way the team enjoyed. Following the theme of the coats, inventions were painted ranges of colors, had different languages written on them, and some even had glitter.

When the competition finally came on January 8, the students had a great time. An event was planned every hour, including Ecology, Optics, Sumo Bots, and Forensics. No one knew the results until the award ceremony, so the suspense was intense.

The day seemed rushed at first since it started at 9 A.M. Some people arrived late, and others had to cancel last minute, causing others to scramble to fill their spots. Things went more smoothly as the day went on, though. When someone was not competing, they sat in Mr. Harsh's classroom or wandered. In between events, the building was filled with music, planning, final tuning of inventions, panicking, re-planning, the spilling of some people's breakfast, playing with inventions, and most of all, idle chit-chat.

The final event and the award ceremony were an hour apart. Through the long wait, the team played charades, the ninja game, and duck-duck-goose, and made up a cheer for the team based on Mr. Harsh. Unfortunately, due to technical difficulties, the ceremony did not start until almost 4:30. The anticipation was high as the results were announced, but the team cheered loudly. Even though they were short six members, it did not put a damper on their spirits. When asked later, junior Krystal Henry said, "We had lots of school spirit."

Tecumseh High School ended up with three fourth place ribbons, four third place medals, five second place medals, and first place medals in Technical Problem Solving and Chemistry Lab. Overall, Tecumseh High took second place, losing to Ann Arbor Green Hills High School.

The team was very excited to get second place, which is better than the school has done in five years. The seniors were overjoyed to have done so great their final year.

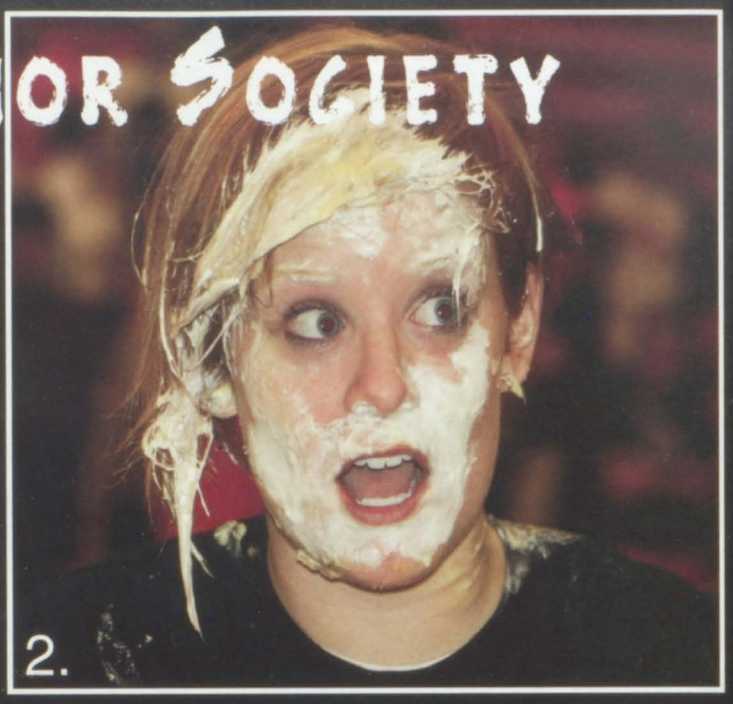
National Honor Society

1. Mrs. Shepherd (the adviser of NHS) eats the pie she just had thrown in her face for a good cause. The NHS members collected donations for a good cause and for each "money level" the student body raised, they earned the right to pie more teachers. 2. Ms. Lemon right after being pied. She was a bit surprised by how delicious helping others could be.



Working Hard to Make a Difference

Honor Society President Jonathan Collins was intent on making more of a difference than the group had in past years. He reinforced community service hour requirements and promoted a good work ethic. He said, "Being a leader is much more than just telling people what to do. To me, being a leader means setting a good example," and that is exactly what Collins did. Most of the projects took over 15 hours to plan in seminar and after school, a hefty load for a senior anxious to graduate, but Collins had fun working hard. He said, "This year, I enjoyed working with community members on projects and involving the entire NHS."

NHS members collaborated with the TMS Builders Club this fall to run a haunted house at the Appleumpkin festival. Though it was complete chaos behind the scenes, they managed to pull off a good show. They played wounded soldiers, presidents, and widows of the civil war in the top levels of the Bidwell building, and boy was it hot. They participated in mock battles, breathing heavily with sweat dripping down their necks, and when the soldiers fell to the ground "dead," it was also from exhaustion. It was a lot of work, but all done in the name of helping the community, so after putting smiles on many peoples faces, they were able to leave the building with a smile of their own.

NHS also sponsored the "Change for Change" fundraiser that gave students an opportunity to pie their teachers in the face in exchange for donations. The members tutored middle school kids after school as well. It was fun for them to go back to the middle school and help kids because they were really appreciative and looked up to the NHS members.

Making, Planning, and Having Fun!

"Student Council is about trying to involve everyone in the student body so they can have a good high school experience," says junior, Destiny Cook. It takes "someone who is outgoing and willing to work with others" she says, to be successful in Student Council. In addition "We're sometimes too serious for our own good!" stated sophomore, Arielle Aughenbaugh. This year, Student council participated in Toys for Tots, Homecoming, TICWISS, and Spirit Week. To prepare for these events, meetings are held to assign committees as well as set up a general plan. To Cook, even though this year was stressful, she says that "my favorite part of this year has been getting to know the people in my seminar." Working with others obviously plays an important role in Student Council. They usually met about once a month during the school year, though there is a great deal of after-school work as well. They also planned the assemblies for the year. To get ready for an assembly, "Student Council has a meeting to plan what we need to do." Cook said. "We usually have different committees to get the job done quicker."

This year went by with no mishaps, no mistakes, and no muck-up in planning. This flawless performance is due, of course, to the efforts of the hard-working members of Student Council. They persevered through the stressful proceedings of the year, like Homecoming and TICWISS; they powered through charitable events, like Toys for Tots, and came through it all unscathed. It just goes to show that a group of responsible students can come together and accomplish amazing things if they set their minds to it. Here's hoping next year goes just as well.

Homecoming, The Halloween Dance,The Holiday Dance, TICWSS, Prom, After Prom, The Senior Mystery Trip, and Graduation. The events that break up the droll of school and bring life to the hallways and bleachers. They were something to look forward to while sitting under a pile of homework, and will be something to look back on when we leave High School behind. These events brought the student body together to decorate and celebrate.

Avoiding Disaster

School safety was very important. After the bomb threats that the school experienced a few years ago, security was stepped up, the ID policy was implemented and drills were taken more seriously.

The students were not big fans of the IDs, but the staff insisted that it would help identify people that did not belong in the building. However, the kids that were thrown out due to lack of identification did not agree that they were a threat to the safety of the student body. They were especially skeptical that it made any difference because many students were able to go weeks without the authorities noticing that they did not have their ID. To the kids. the policy was just another hassle that came with High School, but overall, most people complied with the rule whether or not they realized the merit of it.

But THS did have a legitimate tornado scare this year. The students scurried out of their A5 classes into the designated "safe" areas. The students that were eating lunch were rather displeased to have been taken away from their meals, and the rest of the students were either concerned for their safety or bored out of their minds. School counselor Ms. LeBar went around and tried to get everyone to sit quietly and face the wall, but that did not go over too well with a bunch of rowdy teenagers that were all asking, hopefully, if they would be sent home early. They were given a sharp, "No." and told to stop asking.

Most kids either talked with their friends or read whatever book they had taken with them to cover their heads. But overall, the students were happy to have avoided the disaster that tornadoes bring.

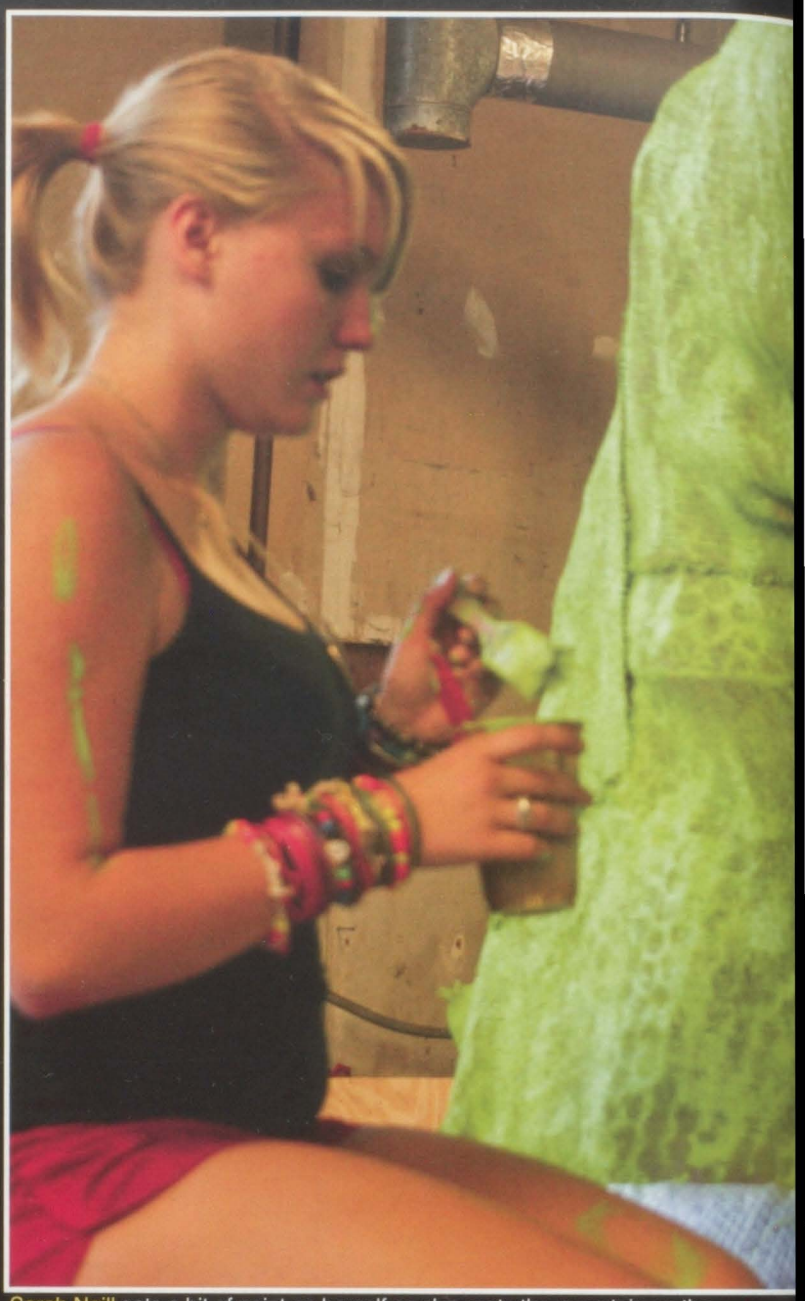
Hard Work Great Fun

It was not an easy task to build a float in one week, but it was manageable for Tecumseh High School students. A large number of students showed up at noon, ready to put in some hard work and get their hands dirty. On the first Saturday of float building, the students came into the bus garage with a bunch of supplies and a trailer. At any other time of the year it would be slow and quiet; however, during homecoming week, the bus garage turned into a hectic and crowded place. Many students complained that doing all floats in one place made it harder to keep secrets and surprise other students, and that was true; however, it really brought us all together. Float building didn't just bring the individual classes together, though; it brought all the classes together as a school.

When students stepped into the bus garage, they heard things like, "Can you hold this part?" or "Can we borrow this tool?" It made students realize how much they depended on each other to be successful. There was still a competition going on and some smack talk and gossip about stealing ideas.

Painting, pomping, hammering, and gluing were all a part of the float building process, along with students being attacked by paint and glue. Students rarely went home without some paint on them. The winning floats were announced during the homecoming game halftime. The seniors came in first followed by juniors, sophomores, and freshmen.



Sarah Neill gets a bit of paint on herself as she coats the mountain on the seniors' homecoming float.

Sophomore Nicole Greene adds the final touches to a phrase that was painted on the Class of 2013's float.

Pep Rally

The pep rally, parade, dance, and football game are some of Tecumseh High School's events on homecoming day. Filled with excitement and school spirit, kids showed up with class shirts and smiles on Friday morning, ready for a day of fun activities. This year, football coach and physical education teacher, Mr. Mensing, led the "Go Indians" cheer that was formerly led by Mr. Schmidt, who retired last year. Mensing was not nervous to be in front of the whole student body and suspected that the students and staff enjoyed his version of the cheer, although he was winded after putting so much energy into getting us pumped up for the game. As for the attempted flip that concluded the cheer, it was his version of the cartwheel that Mr. Schmidt used to do after the cheer in his early years at THS. Senior Sean Cox said, "Mensing did the cheer well, but I miss Schmidt's more laid-back version that still got us excited for the game." Mensing plans to carry out the "Go Indians" cheer tradition for future assemblies and considers himself the new "cheerleader"... without the skirt.

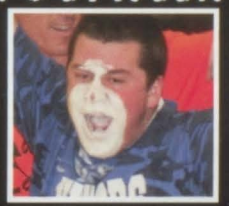
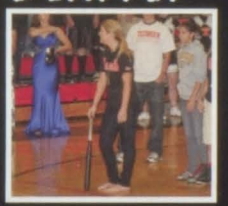
Heated Competition Between Classes

Junior Nate Haeussler untangles his leg from the hula hoop while holding hands with Andrew Esty. The object of the game was to move the hula hoop down and back the line of people while holding hands before the other classes did. It made for some pretty awkward stances and a lot of laughs.

Sophomores Colleen Roberts, Kylie Hill, and Paige Cadmus put all their strength into pulling the tug-of-war rope. This was the most competitive game at the Homecoming Pep Rally. It was the seniors who ultimately won this challenge.



Junior Chad McClinchey proudly shows his whipped cream-covered face. In this game, participants were presented with a plate of whipped cream that had gummy bears hidden inside it. They had to remove the gummy bears without using their hands. The fastest grade won.



Senior Sarah Sailus laughs before twirling around with her forehead placed on the bat and racing toward the other side of the gym. She was followed by Jacob Kelley, Erica Steuwe, and CJ Horn in this wacky relay. The others had to do things like keep a balloon in the air.

Homecoming Night

The Game of the Year

From the Field

Homecoming was THE most exciting game of the year, but for seniors who realized their high school careers were finally coming to an end, the event brought out some mixed emotions. Tecumseh senior football player, Cody Ross, was sad that this was his last high school homecoming. Although they had practiced against Dexter's plays and tried to keep a confident attitude throughout the game, the Tecumseh Indians lost 19-26. Despite the loss, the game was fun, just like it had been for Ross for the last four years. Ross said, "Me personally, I don't think I could have done much more to change the outcome of the game because I played pretty good."

From the Jungle

Hours after the parade, students returned to the school on the crisp September night to cheer the football team to a win. A junior in the jungle, Megan Marko, was one of the many students there to support the team. As for her knowledge of the game, she understood what was going on the majority of the time, thanks to her experiences on the powder puff team, but she was mostly there to enjoy a night out with friends. She said, "It's sad to see high school going by so fast, but it's also exciting." The jungle is rowdy and crowded, but to Tecumseh High School students, it is a tradition and a place to gather that is loved by all. Marko enjoys the themes that change from week to week.

The Girls Take the Field

1. Sophomore Pilar Summerlin rips away from the seniors in the first game. 2. Senior Brittany Birt moves the ball up the field. 3. Freshmen and Juniors face off. 4. Junior Destiny Cook prepares to hike the ball behind her as her classmates Megan Marko, Emily Eisele, and Marie Falzone size up the competition and get ready to "tackle." 5. Senior Kaylene Kasper running to reverse the ball to Shannon Peake.

Play by Play

Every year, girls have the chance to play football and represent their classes. Seniors play the sophomores in the first round. After that game, the juniors play the freshmen. After the first round, the winners of both games face each other to determine the PowderPuff Champion.

In the first game, seniors - coached by Matt Napieralski, Spencer DeLand, Caleb Armstrong, and Gavin Burstall - overpowered the sophomores - coached by Sage Rebottaro, Cole Amstutz, John Terry, and Nick Coffin - 22-0. On the first play, Ashley Russell handed off the ball to Kaylene Kasper, and Kasper reversed the ball to Shannon Peake who scored a touchdown. After that, the sophomores were unable to get any closer than 10 yards away from the goal line.

In the second game, the juniors - coached by George Preston, Zack Lorraine, Jared Powell, and Brad Vannatter - won 16-6 against the freshmen, who competed remarkably well against the quick juniors. The juniors were able to pull through though, and made it to the championship game.

In the final game, the seniors beat the juniors 8-6. The seniors scored first in the first half and completed a two-point conversion. The juniors controlled the ball for 7½ minutes and scored a touchdown. They were unsuccessful in their two-point conversion attempt, and the seniors stayed ahead by two. The seniors kept the lead for the remainder of the game and won.

The Halloween Dance was hosted by the Media Club in an effort to raise money for the publication of the school's newspaper, The Drumbeat, and the yearbook. The club participants spent all day creating a "Haunted Locker Room" entrance to the dance. As students walked through, they were startled as the walls seemed to come alive. The dance was slow to start, but with tables of food and a bounce house, they had fun.

Half-way through the dance, the DJs stopped the music for a costume contest. Everyone who wanted to participate in a category showed off their costume and three judges (teachers) voted on which student/group would win a free yearbook.

The students at THS had a pretty good time at the Halloween Dance, and the money raised from it helped provide The Drumbeat at no cost to the students.

The Halloween Dance

A Sweet-Tooth for Success

The Breakfast of Champions is a special breakfast for students who receive high grades. The first session is for students who have a GPA of 3.0-3.49 and the second is for students with a GPA of 3.5-4.0. The students are rewarded for their high grades with a breakfast prepared by King Pancake, and a certificate of achievement. Principal Mills was all smiles and high-fives as he proudly rewarded the top achieving students in the school. The students enjoyed the break from studying and the time they were able to share with their academic equivalents while eating delicious pancakes smothered in syrup. The certificates are also a nice thing for parents to collect, put up on the fridge, or show off at a grad party.

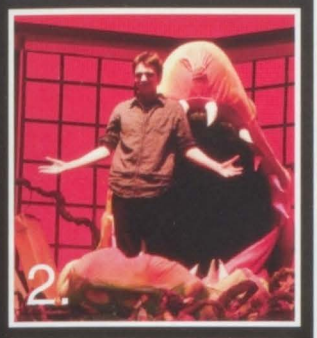
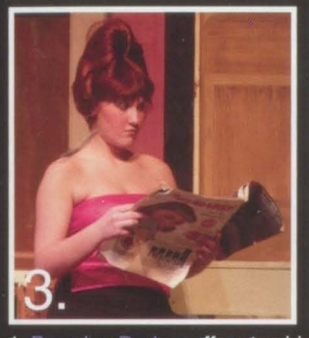
Here the cast turn their changing room into a club, blast music, and begin to dance and grind. One thing is certain, not only did this cast know how to put on a play, they know how to party!

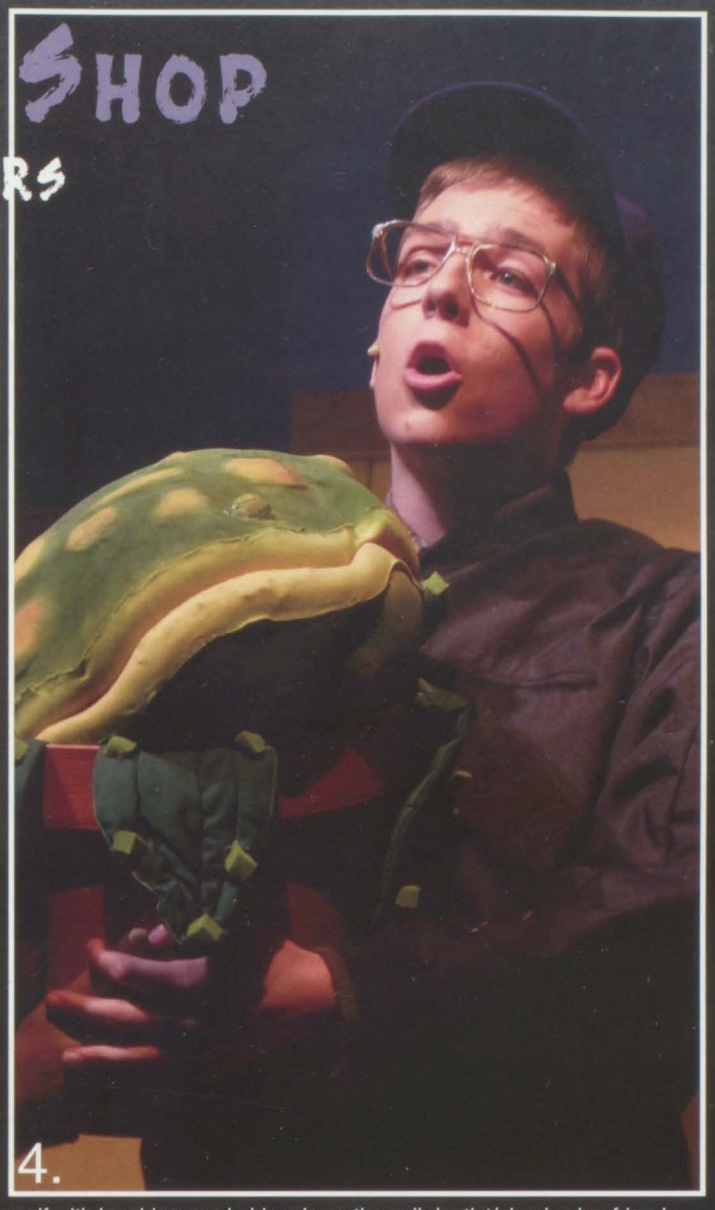
Lovable Alter-Egos

The TYT show Tomb with a View was not only fun to watch, but also fun to perform. The show was a comedy thriller about the sinister Tomb family awaiting the will-reading of their late father. With each family member about to receive millions of pounds, it is no surprise that when mysterious murders begin, foul play is suspected. As the story unravels, the audience can't help but fall in love with this cast of misfits and possible killers. There's Marcus Tomb, a man who thinks he is Julius Caesar himself, played by senior Patrick McAran (2). Hamilton Penworthy, the shifty lawyer with an agenda of his own, is played by senior Leon Miller (3 right). Lucien Tomb, a wannabe scientist, is played by senior Alden Eubanks. Dora Tomb, a bumbling character brewing up dangerous concoctions and burying not just secrets in the gardens, is played by sophomore Jillian Travis. Emily Tomb, the masculine and brutally honest one in the show, is played by junior Courtney Lavoy. Anne Franklin, Marcus' seemingly innocent nurse who has some secrets of her own, is played by junior Linda Hanes (2). Agatha Hammond, the maid of the house who tries to keep everyone in line, is played by senior Ashlynne Abraham. Freda Mountjoy, a writer from London who is being left all the money, is played by senior Caitlin Dunlap (3 middle). Perry Potter, Freda's quiet but lovable assistant, is played by senior Adam Spreeman (1,4). Monica Tomb, a character with loose morals who tries to seduce Perry, is played by junior Alixe Kendrek (1). Last but not least, rounding off the cast is the butler who steals the show by flitting between scenes and adding comedy of his own, played by sophomore Matt Maki (3 left).

Little Shop of Horrors







1. Brandon Derby suffocates himself with laughing gas in his role as the evil dentist/abusive boyfriend. 2. Bryan Gilbey, who voiced the plant named Audrey II, emerges at the end of the show from the puppet he gave life to . 3. Brianne Nowak reads a magazine outside of the flower shop where she often gossiped with the other two glamour girls, Becca Nowak and Sarah Neill. 4. Matt Maki holds the plant he named Audrey II after his crush, Audrey, who was played by Jordyn Norkey.

A Truly Great Production

Exceptionally talented student thespians dedicated many hours to putting on the show Little Shop of Horrors, affectionately shortened to Little Shop. The horror-comedy delighted audiences, but more importantly, was a fantastic and memorable production for the cast. They bonded well, and despite the chunk rehearsals took out of homework and free time, the cast was excited to come to each practice. The stage gave them a place to display their talents, meet new friends, and add a bit of comic relief to their stressful teenage lives. Sophomore Erica Buechele said, "Theater is an important thing to promote within schools because it lets people express themselves in an environment where people won't judge them. It also promotes working together to make something great."

And make it great they did! Matt Maki played the botanist, Seymour, who happens upon a strange plant (voiced by Bryan Gilbey.) The plant brought Seymour fame and fortune, but it's less-than-tasteful appetite puts those close to Seymour in jeopardy. The audiences were riveted by the portrayal of such a troubled young man.

Gory Details All of the

After dress rehearsal, Erica Buechele rushed to Speedway to pick up some food without removing her stage makeup and gore from the bloody final scene. She was met with some very confused glances. But Buechele thought it was pretty funny. She said, "Going to Speedway looking like a zombie was hilarious! People looked at me pretty weirdly. It probably didn't help that I looked tired from rehearsal and added to the zombie look." Buechele had a lot of fun throughout the entire play, but she enjoyed the end product the most. She said, "My favorite part of Little Shop was definitely Tech Week. That's when the show really comes together." She also enjoyed hanging out with the cast at cast parties where they were finally able to relax from all their hard work.

Backstage Drama

Erica Buechele (Top) and Jordyn Norkey (Bottom) come backstage after the last scene of the play when everyone is eaten by the plant. Backstage was really hectic while the play is being performed because the actors had to rush backstage and change before they were up again. There are often clothes flying through the air in there.

Tecumseh Indians Celebrate Winter Sports Season

TICWSS Court

From Sweat to Sparkles

"Oh gosh, I'm so sweaty. I hope my face isn't red" is not what the typical TICWSS queen would be thinking as she walked out in front of the cheering crowd, but basketball star turned royalty, Shannon Peake, sure was. After playing hard for two quarters of the basketball game, Peake walked out beneath the orange and black balloon arches to represent her class and find out who had won. Despite being clad in a sweaty jersey, she took home the crown. "I was really surprised and really happy. I thought, 'Oh wait, that's me!'" said Peake referring to when she was named TICWSS queen. Although she was not the cookie cutter queen, Peake was thrilled to be given the chance to represent her class. "I definitely felt honored to even be on court and represent the seniors. It was cool to have some of my friends on court with me too," said Peake.

It was a fantastic experience for Peake, but there were some nerve-wracking parts too. She said, "The scariest part was walking in my high heels at the assembly. I was so afraid that I was going to fall."

Peake was a wonderful representation of what it means to have real school spirit. She fought hard to bring Tecumseh High School a win and then managed to walk out in front of everyone at halftime, looking just as beautiful as the girls in formal dresses. Peake said, "It was a great experience, and I appreciate all of the votes I received. I look forward to coming back next year to crown the next queen!"

Setting up Spirit

The class officers and Student Council worked hard to make TICWSS a fun time for the students at THS. Each class was given a pillar of the hallway to decorate for the spirit competition (won by the seniors). Also, the class officers got together and came up with great themes for Spirit Week like Nerd Day and Plaid Day. Each day, the teachers counted the participants in each class and the class with the highest percentage of participants was announced as the daily winner. The assembly was also a great day for spirit as the classes battled each other in tug-o-war and other games.

An Evening Under the Sea

Our "Under the Sea" Prom theme was hosted by the junior class at Washtenaw Community College. Students gathered in groups to attend the big day on April 30. Many took professional pictures before they hit the dance floor, capturing memories before creating more. The room was filled with a blue light and white balloons representing the water and bubbles of the sea. They also had centerpieces that were bowls with goldfish swimming around a candle. Unfortunately, many of the fish met untimely deaths when some of the senior boys put them in the toilets.

When students were not dancing, they were hitting the snack bar or cooling off at the tables. The D.J. had an easy time keeping everyone on the dance floor. Songs like "Cupid Shuffle" and "Electric Slide" attracted students like sharks to chum.

Brooke Garner was named Prom Queen and Caleb Armstrong was Prom King.

As all kings and queens are required to do, they tried to dance to a song. This year's song of choice was "Teach Me How to Dougie" by Cali Swag. Students who knew how to Dougie stormed the dance floor and started the dance back up.

As the night began to come to a close, students started making their way to the doors. As they left, they grabbed their key chain pictures taken previously and a blue water bottle representing Prom. Straight from Prom, students went back to the high school to attend After Prom, which was full of fun and games for all. All students who attended, especially seniors, will always remember the 2011 Prom fondly.

Mystery Solved!

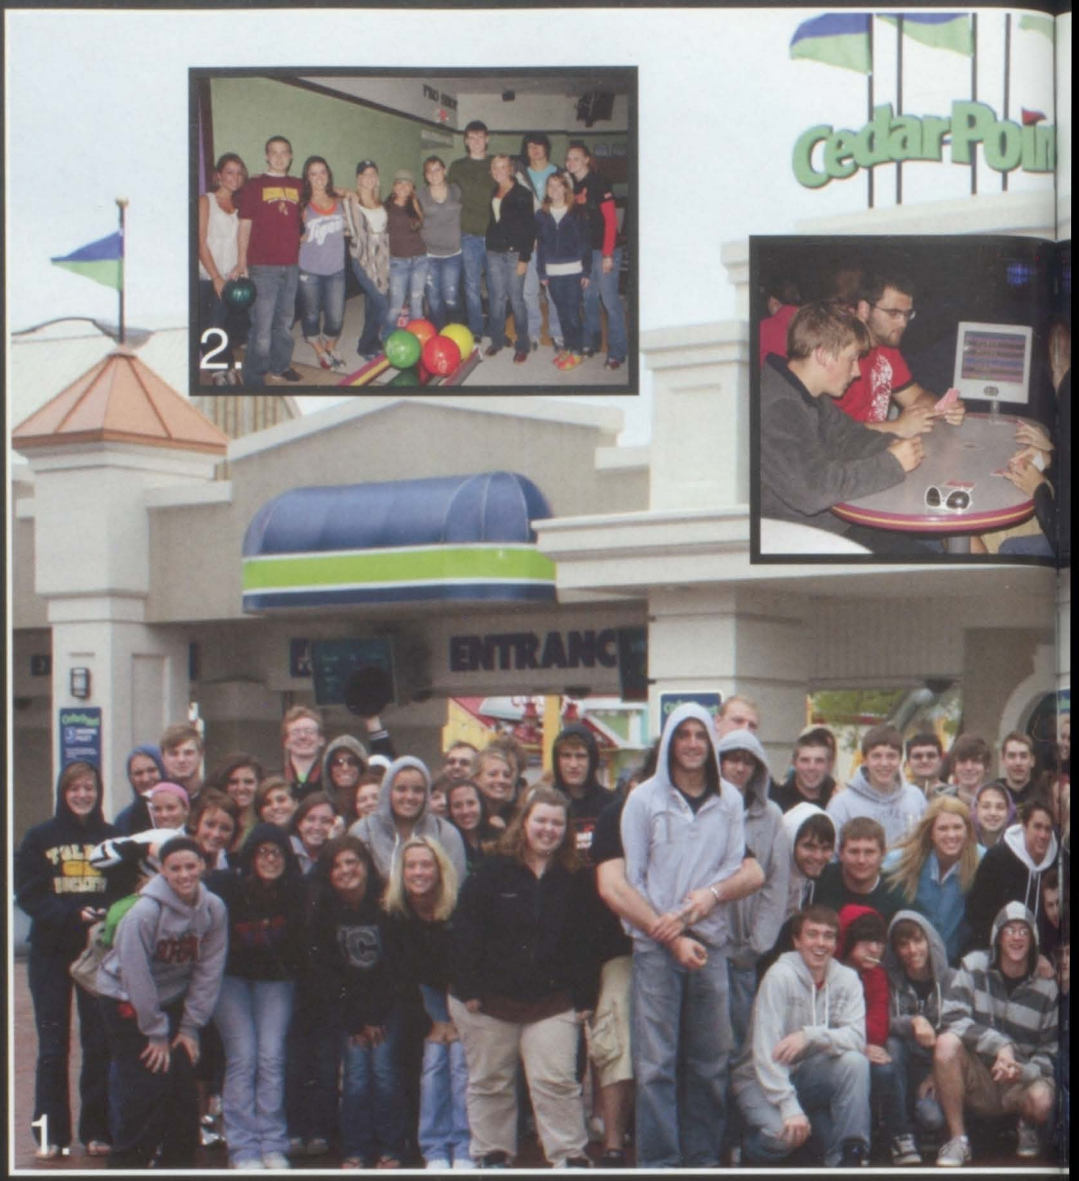
The annual Senior Mystery Trip is an adventure sponsored by parents, advisors, and the school district. It is the only legitimate form of "Senior Skip Day," as seniors who attend are allowed to miss the day after the trip because it starts really early and ends really late.

This year's adventure into the unknown was a mystery even to those who planned it due to unexpected weather events that altered the trips destinations on a seemingly hourly basis. Mrs. Peake, ever the over-organized, managed to come up with a Plan B and even a Plan C as necessity called for them.

For several years students have guessed that the "mystery" would be Cedar Point. Each graduating class had been wrong. So, when it was actually true, there were few who were still guessing it after so many years of "never" going to Cedar Point.

Though the go-cart track was flooded out by rain and replaced with a movie and the evening cruise was canceled by rough seas, Cedar Point was still a go, which gave the adults time to book a rental hall, dance floor, DJ, and have food delivered.

Life is often a mystery. The class of 2011 has discovered within themselves the ability to persevere and adapt in the face of unexpected and uncontrollable conditions. Imagine that! A lesson learned on a "skip day."



(BELOW) 1. After throwing a good ball, Ashley Wheeler glances back to view her results. 2. While cold from the rain, the covered tables offer shelter for Abby Ross, Ashley Benedict and friends. 3. This looks much more comfortable than the buses we have at school. Nice! 4. The backup plan allows everyone a chance to dance, even if it's not on a cruise ship. 5. Jacob Kelley shows off his wild side... on the Merry-Go-Round. 6. Steven Wegner, Keaton Ruttinger and Randall Williams get much needed sustenance after a long adventure.

A break in the action allows for a quick game of cards between Nick Westgate, Justin Monahan and Alden Eubanks. 4. Logan Harsh and Eric Scheerer are impressed with a travel coach carrying the Tecumseh Indian name (the Indian part, anyway). 5. Students gather for a snack at the first stop on the journey: the bowling alley.

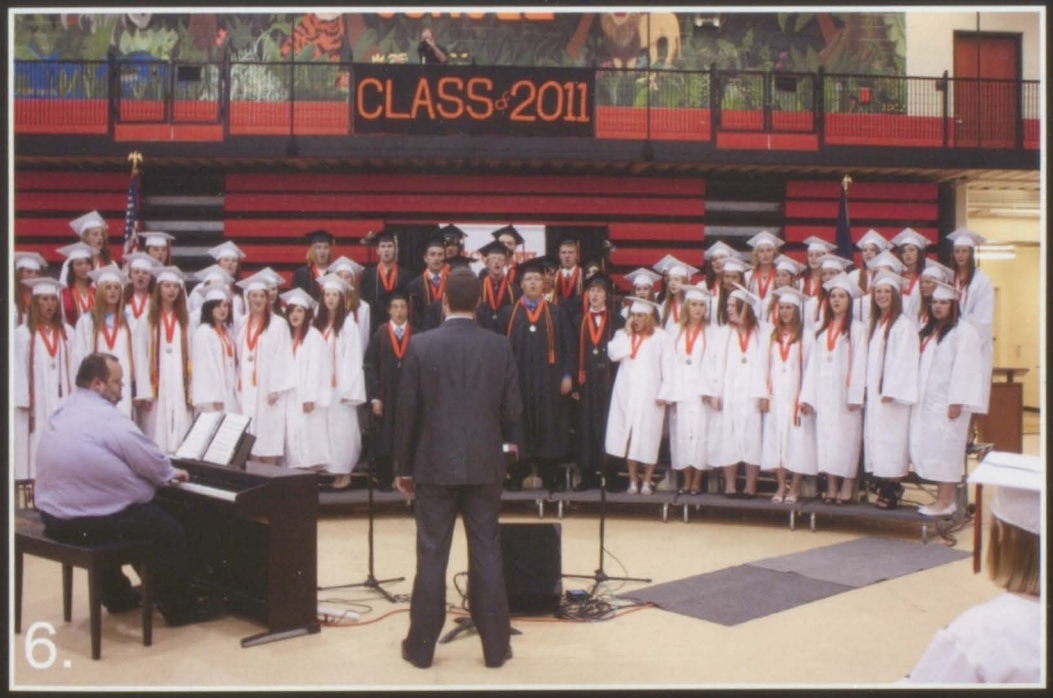
GRADUATION 2011

After four years of dedicated work and perseverance, this is the moment when seniors' accomplishments are publicly recognized.

With tradition, "Pomp and Circumstance," the class song, "Never Forget You" (Lupe Fiasco) and entertaining (Salutatorian Justin Monahan) and inspiring (Valedictorian Christine Goss) speeches, 199 graduates walked out of the school to pursue dreams, challenges, and to begin the Dr. Seuss-like discovery of the places they'll go. Good luck on your journey!



4. Class President Courtney Hong delivers her Presidential Address and Welcome during the graduation ceremony.

5. Realizing the dream of graduating: priceless.

6. Mr. DeWeese leads the Senior Choir in the singing of the Alma Mater, accompanied by Mr. Bough and the Symphony Band.

Rockin' Out

Takumi Ogata

Rockstar in the making, Takumi Ogata, started playing guitar in 2007 and his love for it has kept him practicing dutifully for the past four years. For Ogata, playing guitar isn't just a hobby, it's a major part of life. "From Monday to Wednesday, I try to practice for about one hour to two hours. On Thursday and Friday, I practice for about three hours, and on the weekend, I practice for about five to six hours," said Ogata. Devoting so much time to it has made Ogata an extremely talented guitarist, but it also makes for a very tight schedule. Ogata said, "It is hard to juggle school and playing guitar, so I try to plan ahead and manage my time in order for me to have enough time to do both activities efficiently."

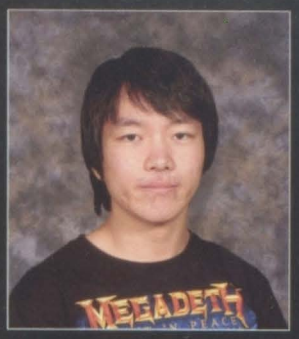
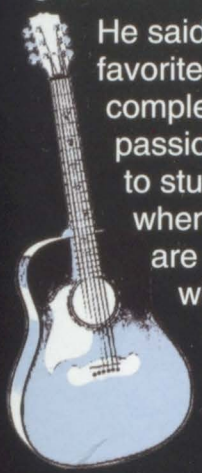
A Love for Music

Ogata played at school as well as at home. He was in the school's Road Show band, which plays backup for Company choir. However, Ogata branches out into a less tame genre while at home.





He said, "Progressive rock/metal is my favorite type of music because of its complexity." Ogata plans to pursue his passion for music as a career. He plans to study Audio/Sound Engineering when he goes to college. His parents are very supportive, and they, along with school programs like Road Show, have given Ogata the ability to develop his talent.

Planning Events

Madisen See (Top) led the sophomore class as President along with Kierston Wilson (Bottom) who served as Vice President. The Treasurer was Nicole Greene, and the Secretary was Abbie Lee. Together they organized float building and their Powderpuff team, created the class T-shirts, and decorated the Sophomore class Spirit Pole for TICWSS.

1. Sarah Goss smiles through the gore on her face backstage at the dress rehearsal of TYT's Little Shop of Horrors. 2. Pilar Summerlin and Casey Hunt pose with the rest of the homecoming court. 3. Alex Swindle runs at a cross country meet and represented the Class of 2013's spirit by giving it all he had. 4. Kylie Hill paints the homecoming float and gets a little white paint on her cheeks in the process.

Sophomore Survival

The class of 2013 was faced with hard classes like chemistry and geometry/algebra II, but great teachers were able to get most of the students through it. They even had a bit of fun. Mr. Ferwerda let them light methane bubbles on fire at the end of the year, along with various other experiments the classes enjoyed. How could it not be fun with a wizard as your teacher?! ;) At THS, the teachers can make any subject fun.

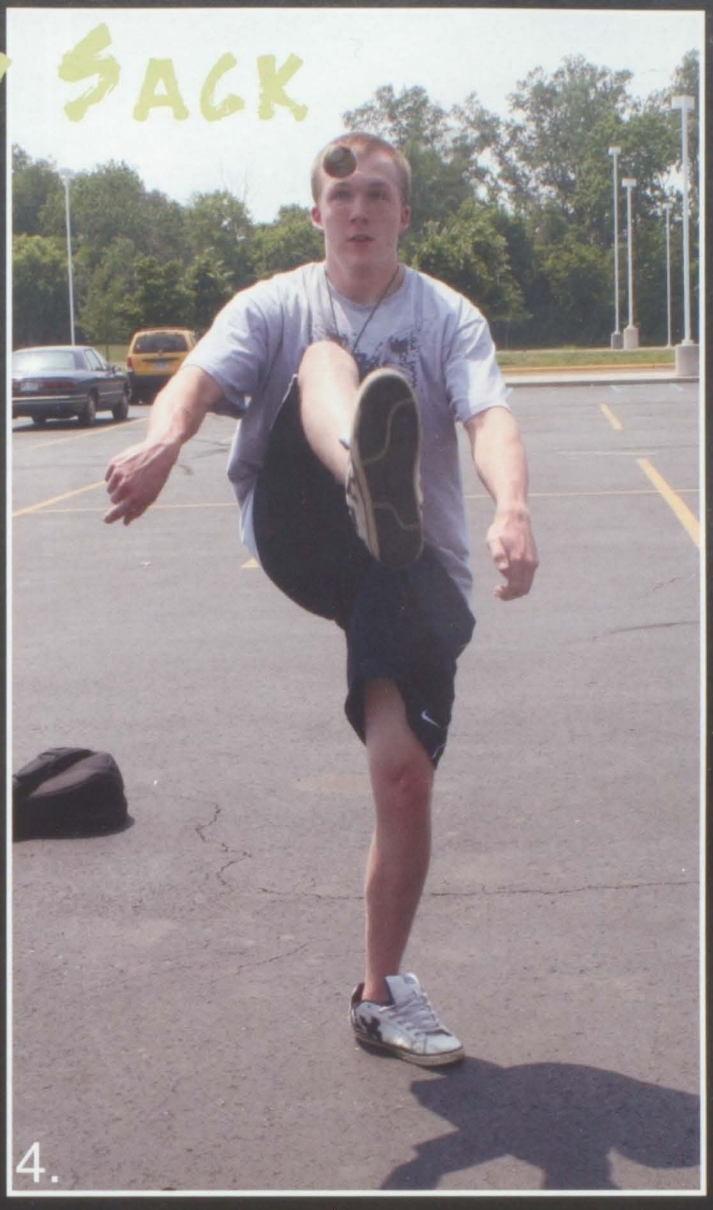
Hacky Sack



1. Wyatt Prince passes during an after school practice. 2. Wyatt kicks the hacky sack to Nicole Randolph. 3. Justin Wollard perfects his form as Nicole Randolph looks on. 4. Wyatt Prince launches it eye high in the THS parking lot after school. (Below) Tyler Williams demonstrates his quick reflexes and flexibility: 5. using the side of his foot, 6. the top of his foot in a high, close kick and 7. even his knee when necessary.

Sacking it up!

While most kids rush out of the building after school, a few hang out after school and play hacky sack. This tradition began when Mr. Niles told them that hacky sacking was not allowed in school, so they took it outside. Listening to Kid Cudi and talking about the latest homework or tests, the boys (and a girl) have become pro-sackers. Nailing tricks like the crucifix and inside kicks, they have created their own school sport. Hacky sacking for Tecumseh are sophomores Griffin Obied, Tyler Williams, Patrick Humphries, and juniors Nicole Randolph, Justin Wollard, and Wyatt Prince. Earlier in the year the students were playing hacky sack in the school. Mr. Niles took the sack away. "Apparently it scratches up the walls…" says sophomore Patrick Humphries. Instead, the boys found a small Dalmatian Beanie Baby and taped it together, thus creating a hacky sack. Together they manage to have millions of ideas like this…although now rarely used, it still creates some laughs. They once had an idea to learn how to do front flips on the ground, so they did! Now some of them can do full front flips. One typical day after school the boys were hacking and sacking, when Justin kicked his hacky sack a little too hard. It blazed past the boys, into his sunroof, and into the cup holder: that's skill. Tyler Williams has created a lot of memories for himself and his friends this year while hacky sacking, and they will always remember the day Justin epicly failed.

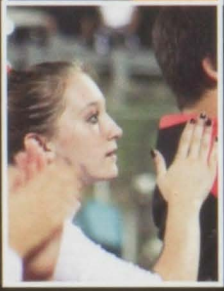
Anna George took one for the team when she dove into a plate of whipped cream to try to retrieve all her gummy bears before the upperclassmen. did.



Breonna Welter cheers on the football team on a Friday night. She also helped pump up her class who were experiencing the togetherness of The Jungle for the first time.

Surviving the First Year

The first year of high school can start off pretty scary, but the class of 2014 adjusted well. They learned to stay on the right side of the hallway and where all their classes were, but if they were lost, someone would usually point them the right way. The same friendliness was not found when they went through the wrong door, but hey, there has to be some kind of hazing, and a loud, "WRONG DOOR!" isn't too bad.

The freshmen also learned the importance of organization and studying. They were hit hard with classes like Biology CP and Geometry, but with a little encouragement, they were able to get through it. Some kids like Renee Armstrong and Ben Myers were able to take on even more advanced classes. Armstrong doubled up and took Geometry and Algebra II at the same time, while Myers tested out of those as well as pre-Calc, which landed him in AP Calc! Now those are some over-achieving freshmen!

The class also experienced some new school events like TICWSS and the Holiday Dance. Though it took some time to start dancing, they broke out of the awkward middle school stand-by-your-friends-and-jump-around thing and joined the party.

The freshmen did an all right job of surviving their first year of high school and learned a lot along the way, but most importantly, they grew together and learned that they have to work together to make it through the next three years.

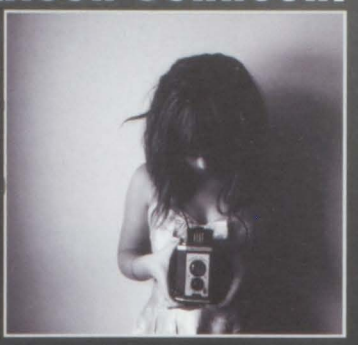
Photographer Madison Johnson:



Madison Johnson found her passion on a family trip when her dad busted out a camera and showed her how to let her creativity capture the beauty of the world. Johnson said, "Photography allows me to convey a message without words. It allows me to find beauty in the little things in life and the beauty in everything." She continued to explore her passion by starting a 365 project in which the photographer takes a picture every day for a year in order to challenge themselves to think of creative photographs. Johnson takes pictures of everything from strawberries to little plastic animals for her 365. Macro is her favorite form of photography, so her subjects are usually small, but she also dabbles in a bit of portraiture (assisted by a wireless remote.)

Johnson is also an avid collector of antique cameras and often works with film. Some might call this a dying art, but Johnson views photography as an art form and thinks that film photography should be kept alive. She adores he old cameras and even uses them as subjects for her 365 project.

She says that she is inspired by the works of the famous photographer Ansel Adams and hopes one day to be as great as he. She already has had one of her photographs published in National Geographic (the picture that won is located below) and has won numerous other awards.

Johnson hopes that one day her talent will earn her a job as a photojournalist and allow her to travel the world with her beloved camera in hand.

Welcome to The Jungle

The Jungle comes to life as students covered in Orange and Black fill the far corner of the of the football stadium stands or the gym bleachers. Their voices cry out wildly in support of their beloved Indians. Here at THS, we bleed Orange and Black. When our teams succeed, our hearts soar, and when they struggle, we struggle right along with them. We feel a certain sense of togetherness in the Jungle that is sometimes missed in the hallways. In the Jungle, the super fans lead the entire student body in cheers to rev up our discouraged players, and when they succeed, the Jungle explodes with the sound of cheers and vuvuzela horns. Then the band starts and the Jungle moves together, dancing, as our school song is played.

Horsin' Around

"To be an Equestrian, you have to be open-minded and willing to work. Even if you don't win, you need to stay optimistic," said Laura Apolloni (9th grader). This outlook seemed to embody the mindset of the Equestrian team's season. Through all the ups and downs, the team wore a smile and put their best foot—or rather, hoof—forward. Ashley Kimmitt (9th grade) said, "the worst part of the season was when five horses were either sick or injured." Sara Savoia's horse was one that fell sick, but a local supporter allowed her to borrow a charming horse named Motion, whom Savoia affectionately referred to as Mo. Savoia said, "I met Mo 10 days before the first meet. Switching that fast is kind of like switching schools and expecting to be friends with everyone within 10 days." This kind of situation can make or break a team, but it didn't stop these Equestrians!

For the incoming freshmen, there was only one meet they had to attend in MS; this year was a little different. "We had three meets instead of only one," said Kimmitt. That wasn't the only difference though. The team was much smaller this year than in the past, and a new coach was appointed as well. But this was not such a bad thing. "I think people are working more as a team now than they used to," stated Apolloni. Kimmitt said, "My favorite moment of this season was when Katy Flint and Suzy Fagan won the two-man relay at all three meets."

It was not all work and no play, however. The Equestrian Team had some pretty interesting traditions... "Some traditions are playing 'Simon Says' at practices" Kimmitt divulged. "We always have TONS of food at the stalls, and Ashley's mom (coach) always makes some kind of cookies," said Apolloni. It was the silly moments that made the season memorable. "The funniest thing was when Tim was modeling Katy's tote bag down the aisle like it was a runway." It is easy to see that through it all, the Equestrian Team was just one big—slightly dysfunctional—family.

Quotable Quotes

"The funniest thing that happened was when we were playing Simon Says at practice and Marlene (Kelley) always lost because she didn't know we were playing!"
~ Laura Apolloni

"My favorite part of the season was spending time with the people on the team. We had a lot of fun."
~ Sara Savoia

Makin' a Splash

The new members of the girls' swimming team bonded with the more experienced swimmers this year due to the strong support system within the team. Team captain Allie Merrit said, "I supported my teammates by always trying to stay positive and encourage everyone to do their best." This type of leadership is what kept the girls swimming through the grueling season.

New team member, Megan Marko, joined as a junior. Marko said, "At first, it was weird to join a team so late because all of the upperclassmen already knew each other, and I didn't know many of them." But she went on to say, "The team made me feel very welcome. They were all really nice and helpful."

The shenanigans and team parties kept the team close-knit and happy. Marko said, "My favorite moment of this year was when we were on the bus and on our way to a meet and Madi See stuck a gummy worm out of her nose. Thinking about it now, it's really gross, but it was really funny then." Moments like this highlighted the girls' swim team's chlorine-filled season and took their minds off their aching muscles.

Anne Mammal gasps for breath after a hard set at practice.

Rachel Waite went to states for the 200 IM which she worked especially hard on at practice.

Foreign exchange student Jacques Strohschein often joined the girls at practice. He went on to join the state team in the boys' season.

Junior, Danielle Sloan said, "The very first day, trying to get into shape is the hardest. We do 10 300's and it's a bit overwhelming for us, especially when you're a freshman."

The diving coach, Norm, helped Marrisa Martin excel in diving her senior year.

Junior Anne Mammel was able to make it through grueling practices because of her dedication to the sport and the support of a fantastic team.

Beep! Beep! Beep!

"Morning practice is tough," said sophomore swimmer Courtney Burtch. The girls dragged themselves out of bed and threw themselves into the pool at 6 a.m. at least once a week for three long months. When the alarm goes off at 5 a.m., all Burtch thinks is, "Oh crap, it's gonna be a long day!" For Burtch, it's not the practice that she dreads, it's waking up so early. The girls practiced for 45 minutes before rushing to the locker room to get dressed for school. Burtch said, "Getting ready for school is crazy in the middle school. First of all, you smell like a pool, and your hair is wet. You have to get ready fast too, to get to class and school on time." But the girls survived the early mornings, and all that extra practice earned some girls state qualifying times.

Out on the Greens

Golf, like any sport, requires hard work. "You have to be very determined and have a good mindset," said freshman Carley LaPlant. The girls on the golf team were extremely close, according to sophomore Paige Watkins. "Like every team there is some drama, and people that don't get along, but for the most part we are all pretty good friends." This group dynamic was essential to good teamwork, but it also made the sport a lot more fun to participate in!

More fun doesn't always mean more focused however… "I think that we all did good, but maybe if we stayed a little more focused we could all perform better, we like to mess around sometimes," said Watkins.

This year, only one member of the team made it to states: Paige Watkins. The team placed 4th at the Tecumseh Invitational and unfortunately, lost SEC's.

"Going to states was probably my favorite part of the season because it was a totally new experience." And of course, it wasn't all work, "It was a lot of fun, and I met some new friends along the way." However it's not all fun and games, either. According to LaPlant, "There are days when you can't hit a good shot - those are the worst. You get so discouraged." It takes a certain type of person to take it. "You will have lots of bad shots, and too many bad days." But the team didn't give up.

According to LaPlant, the most stressful part of golf is meeting team/coach expectations. "It is very stressful when you are playing with someone who is a lot better than you, and you can't match up." Though, not matching up doesn't mean they didn't practice, "The day before a match, we all play nine holes, and the top six scores get to play varsity." That certainly sounds competitive.

Runnin' & Sunnin'

The season was a struggle for the Girls' Cross Country team due to dwindling numbers and frequent injuries, but with Mr. Greene as their ever-supportive coach, they were able to send one girl, Erin Landstrom, to states. They also had a lot of fun over the summer practices and at Camp No Greene. They were very helpful and motivated each other, and this teamwork allowed the girls to have a fantastic season. Senior Erica Steuwe said, "I think my favorite part of the season was being with all the girls and just cheering. We all like being together on the bus, and we enjoyed hanging out in the summer. We spent lots of time bonding."

The boys also had a rough season with a team of only 16. But the boys didn't mind their small numbers too much. Most of them were happy just to enjoy the comradery the team members shared.

They cared about running, but they cared more about each other. Brandon Hurd said, "My favorite part of the season was just hangin' with the guys at the meets, just chillin'." and Levi Polmounter recalled one of his favorite meets, which took place at Lake Erie. "We have two or three people sneak up on the [new runners] and grab them. Then we throw them in the water." They had a lot of fun together, but they were also able to improve quite a bit and sent a few runners to the state competition.

Overall, both the girls' and boys cross country teams were able to come together to make a GREAT season!

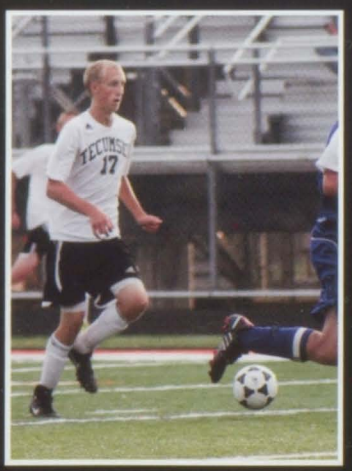
Red Card Disaster

Sam Davitt is an exceptional goalie, and he keeps the team in many of the games. Of course, it was quite a dilemma when Davitt was red-carded during the game against Skyline. Skyline's striker was quick, so Davitt came out of the goal to try to get the ball away. Davitt misjudged the striker's speed, and accidentally slide tackled the striker instead. "I couldn't really believe it at first," Davitt said. He replayed the scene over and over again in his head because that was his first card. The coach was not mad, though. Dailey had told Davitt to come out on any ball before the game started. The card was frustrating because it rendered the team's starting goalie unable to play. And to top it all off, the back-up goalie, Derek Shadley, was in Germany on vacation. Fortunately, the team was able to pull together and play well.

Season Summary

The varsity soccer team was very successful despite having a new head coach, Mr. Dailey. The team finished the season with a record of 15-9-1. Kyle Braunschneider, Nick Nowak, and Chris Howe led the team as captains. Sam Davitt excelled at the goalie position throughout the year as well. The team exceeded expectations by making it to the finals of districts. The team played three exciting games through districts, all being decided by penalty kicks. They won the games against Parma Western (4-3) and Milan (2-1). They lost in overtime 5-3 against Dexter.



"Winning in a PK shootout over Parma Western was my favorite moment of the season. It made me feel a lot closer to the players on the team knowing we will always remember that moment."
~ Casey Hunt

Friday Night Lights

The scoreboard reads 53-27, signifying a Tecumseh Indians victory. Bittersweet tears roll down the faces of players with superhuman statures. Friends and family members of seniors wait to give congratulatory comments to the oncoming train of work-stained and sweat-streaked boys. The last game of the 2010 football season has just transpired.

The Indians had a decent season with wins over Lincoln and Charlotte. The Indians also played tough against Monroe Jefferson, Ann Arbor Huron, and Dexter, coming within single digits of victory. Whether or not we win is not important. What is important is what the players take out of the sport. Football teaches discipline and persistence through conditioning and tiring drills. Coaches do not just shape football players; they shape people, too.

Out on the field, athletes are fulfilling only one of the many leadership roles they will hold during their lives. They are also friends, sons, grandsons, and nephews. They are future teachers, coaches, and even future fathers and grandfathers. This football season molded honorable people as well as a few great players.

Football, for Tecumseh High School, also symbolizes unification of staff, students, fans, and family members alike. Each Friday night consisted of an array of supporters filing in to the west-side bleachers to cheer on the Varsity football team. Some of these nights were filled with freezing temperatures and drenching downpours. Why do fans brave these elements? Because we love our team.

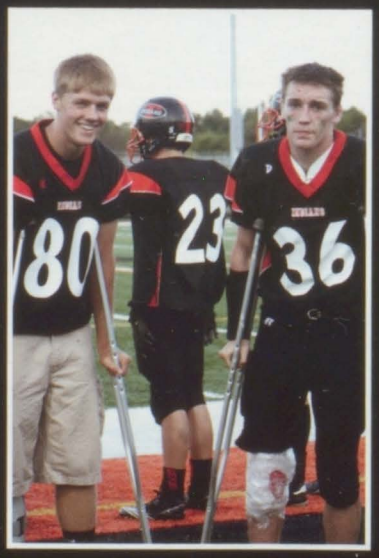
1. Travis Hyder celebrates a home win after the crowd stormed the field. 2. Zach Lorraine seizes the opponent and prepares to tackle. 3. Tyler Bryan holds back the opposition. 4. Austin Slick-Linn runs down the field with the ball. 5. With lightning speed, Drew Grimm races down the field avoiding the enemy. 6. Justin Fetters dodges tackles left and right.

Summer Practice

The Indians attack the sled as if it is an opponent from Adrian during blocking practice over the summer.

The boys take a much needed break on the mats after practicing all day in the hot summer sun.

The boys get down to business as they ram themselves into each other. There is no such thing as too hard here.



Injury Plagued

It is sad when an unforeseen event damages an athlete's body and season. Unfortunately, injuries riddled the senior class during the 2010 season. Matt Napieralski (left), the projected leading rusher on the team, missed most of the season with a broken leg. Tom Carney (right), another leading rusher for the Indians, missed three games with a lower leg injury. Zach Benschoter, another senior, was out a couple of games with a concussion. With these injuries, there is still a game to be played, and the Indians had some success even with these physical setbacks.

Pumpin' It Up!

Nicole Cote, Megan Whitehead, and McKenzie Anderson hold up Taylor Orr.

The fall cheer program was very successful this year. The group was split into three teams that were led by two amazing coaches. Mrs. Lorraine coached both the Freshman Squad and the JV Squad, while Mrs. Mensing coached the Varsity Squad.

The cheerleaders shared many memories during the football season. The Varsity and JV teams bonded at cheer camp and then came back to share their experiences with the underclassmen by hosting a freshman cheer camp. The camps not only improved the teams' skills, but also created great friendships.

Their teamwork promoted school spirit and kept the Jungle entertained.

The girls (and guy) loved standing under the Friday night lights and showing off their skills every time the boys made a touchdown.

They also performed at the Homecoming assembly. They worked for weeks beforehand to put together a fantastic dance routine, which the crowd LOVED.

One thing is for sure at THS, the cheer squads keep the students Pumped Up!

Alison Eubanks holds up the "GO" sign.

From the Jungle

This football season, the Jungle was blessed with the presence of three very spirited mascots: the gorilla, the banana, and the Burger King™. Every Friday night, these three energetic students would take part in getting the crowd riled up with their crazy antics, such as sitting in the opposing team's seats. Once in a while, the gorilla would chase the banana all the way around the field causing a riot among the other students. Members of this comedic troupe included Alden Eubanks, Greg Park, and the always-exuberant, Austin See. Due to the fact that the students in charge of these shenanigans belong to the class of 2011, they will not be back next year to pump up the Jungle. They will be surely missed.

Season Summary

Every senior athlete hopes for a wining team, close friendships, and a great season. Five seniors were able to acquire such things this season. In addition, the team as a whole had an exceptional record of 48-4-2. Unfortunately, the team was unable to lock down a state title, but they put up a tough fight at regionals.

Sarah Sailus, one of the five seniors, enjoyed her success her final year. Sailus led the team in kill percentage and blocks, and she also made the all-county, all-SEC, and all-district teams. She is a spectacular asset to an already wonderfully put-together team. Sailus says, "I'm proud of my team for having an amazing season and always having a positive attitude in every situation."

Practices provided proof of the comfort between team members. Sometimes the team would take a break from their hard work and "goof off." Sailus admits, "Whenever I would jump to serve at practice, Sam Diehl, Gabby Nowak, and Brooke Garner would make fart noises and blame me for it." The girls sure had a sense of humor, and this certainly contributed to the team's success!

Teaming up for a Cure

The volleyball team hosted a tournament to benefit breast cancer awareness. The girls sold T-shirts, organized a silent auction, and sported pink ribbons in their hair to raise money and awareness about an issue that really hit home for them. Their middle school volleyball coach is a survivor of breast cancer, and the girls were quite close to her. It meant a lot to them to be able to raise money to fight something that takes mothers, sisters, and friends from those who care about them.

Winter Cheerleading!

Many of the fall cheerleaders continued their sport into the winter. They continued to work hard on perfecting their stunts and routines.

GIVING IT ALL FOR THE TEAM

The gymnastics team improved significantly this year. They lost some good seniors, but the team was able to come together and do very well. The highest score for the team was 117.050 against Parma Western. Second highest was also at Parma Western with a 116.250. Tecumseh Gymnastics held their annual invitational on December 11, 2010. They came in 7th place with a score of 105.100.

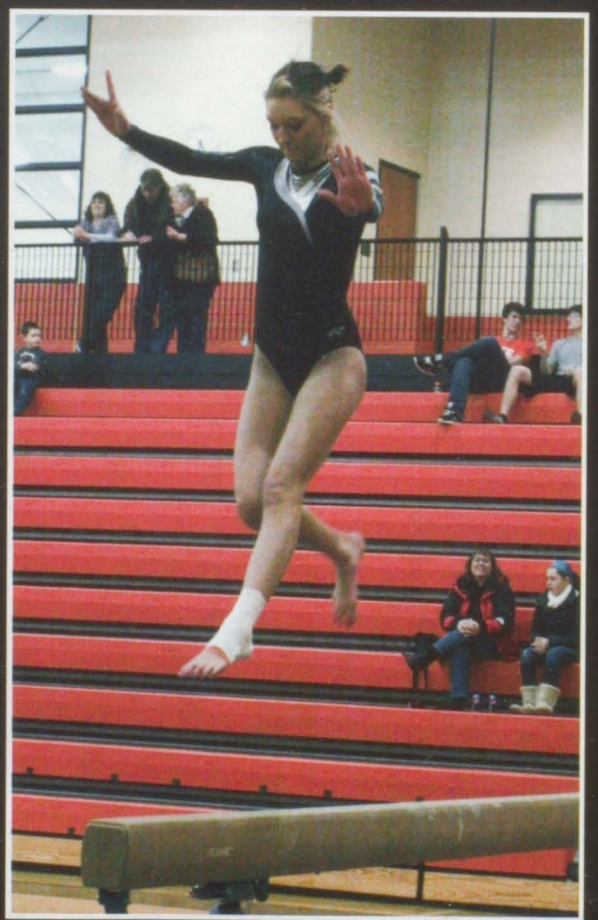
"It doesn't matter how hard you fall or how bad your score is, it's how hard you tried, and that is a virtue that will carry for life," said Courtney Mollette.

There were thirteen girls on the team. Four of them were seniors: Jenna Warner, Tori Thacker, Kyia Salts, and Courtney Mollette. Thacker said "I am going to miss gymnastics so much. I have been doing it for a long time, and now it is all done and over with."

Jenni Posten was the head coach and Sarah Creswell was the assistant coach this year. They both played a major part in motivating the girls and helping them improve.

Each individual improved this year, which made the team improve. They were awarded with most valuable team this year. "I am so proud of this team! The best part of it all was that there was no drama," said Warner. The Gymnastics team is going to continue to improve.



Kyia Salts concentrates as she performs on the balance beam.

Wrestling Champions

Every team sport requires a level of dedication and determination. Wrestling is one of Tecumseh High School's best athletic programs. Most wrestlers felt honored to be part of such a flourishing team. Drew Forrest said that the coaching staff played a large part in the team's victories. "Our two head coaches, Tony Greathouse and Casey Randolph, have had a lot of experience in wrestling. They make sure we are mentally and physically ready to wrestle our opponents." The coaches are not the only people motivating the undefeated team; the athletes encourage each other to push harder. Forrest said, "During practice, we push each other to keep going. During wrestling meets, we cheer each other on while they are out on the mat."

Determination is a definite key to make a team strive for improvement. The Tecumseh wrestling team practices every day, including snow days and vacations. Not only do they practice, they take time to study. The team is required to study from 2:45 – 3:45 in Mr. Freestone's classroom before practice. If they do not attend this hour of study, then they will miss competing in the next scheduled meet.

The Tecumseh wrestling team had an extremely successful season. The team qualified second in the state due to determination and quality coaching. They ended their season with a record of 41-3. In the process, five students competed at the Flo Nationals. One student, C.J. Tripp, was one match away from earning the title "All American" wrestler. Tecumseh wrestlers pushed their way to states. During the finals, they had beaten Allegan and advanced to the semi-finals against Greenville, but a loss to them ended their run. Wrestling had many talented athletes, which made success possible.

Hoops! Shootin'

It's unfortunate when a team works incredibly hard but has no results to show for it. Such was the case for the Boys' Varsity Basketball team. Countless numbers of suicides, down and backs, and the always dreaded "Gerbes" could not help in putting a "W" down in the win column. Though the Indians had a lack of success, they played very close games against Ann Arbor Pioneer, Milan High School, and rival Adrian High School. With the hope of getting a win, the fans could not help but swarm the gym to watch the games.

It was a frustrating season for everybody, but there were some very memorable moments. Kyle Hooper says the "sweetest part of his life" was seeing Jake Moore break a rim while dunking in practice. Another unforgettable aspect of the season was the addition of assistant coach Antonio Griffin. Coach Griffin scrimmaged a lot with the Varsity team, and at 6'8", was known to throw down a jam or two. One specific dunk left Jared Powell with a crotch in his face. Even without a victory, the players and coaches still enjoyed the season. The JV and Freshman Boys' Basketball teams both played quality seasons. The JV team, led in scoring by Jacob Britt and Nick Coffin, ended the season with six wins. The freshman team, with a new coach, also had a great season. Let's hope this success will increase and translate well for the future basketball seasons at THS.

The Girls Be Ballin'

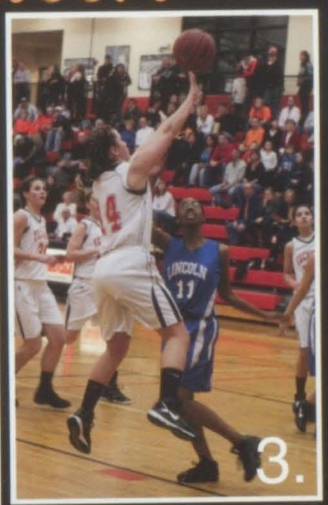
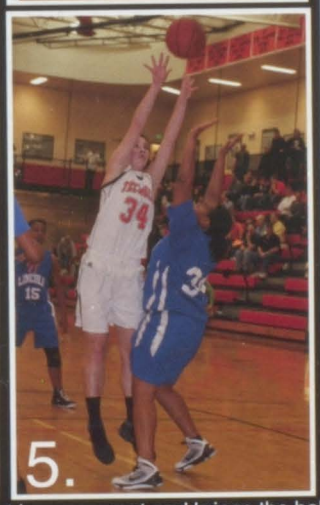
Intensity and drive were the mindset of the girls' basketball team this year. With a time-consuming four-month season, the girls had to keep their hearts in the game and be willing to give up free time and energy for their love of basketball. Leading the Indians throughout the season were captains Shannon Peake, Melissa Felkey, and Jenessa Steuwe. While only winning every now and then, the Indians used their struggles to improve. They worked harder and practiced to improve. Hard practices involved finger drag suicides (ouch) and sprinting, but the team still found ways to make it a fun season. They had fun making bets with their coaches, which resulted in a pink-headed Novak and a dreadlock-sporting Mossburg. They also were assigned "Secret Buddies" to make or buy gifts for.

Junior Allie Bateman said, "I am very proud of them," referring to her team. "It was such a fun and great season." Senior Shannon Peake added, "I love you guys! Thanks for such a great senior year and I wish you all the best of luck next season. Never quit!"

Takin' it to the Hoop!





1. Junior Haven Shaffer darts past her opponent and brings the ball up the court to her teammates. 2. Sophomore Paige Watkins tries to pass to Freshman Nicole Lipnichan. 3. Senior Shannon Peake explodes upward and shoots the ball. 4. Sophomore Sarah Tritt evades her opponent and passes to a teammate. 5. Freshman Anneka Hart pushes through the opponents' outstretched hands to shoot. 6. JV Coach Mr. Novak sports his lovely pink hairdo at a game.

Wardrobe Malfunction

It was the most exciting pre-game warm-up of the year for sophomore Katelynn Silvernail, who had been moved up from the JV team to Varsity due to numerous injuries that had resulted in a shortage of players. Nervous for her first home Varsity game, Silvernail dressed and ran out to the court only to be told by her teammates that her warm up jersey was on backwards. As if once wasn't embarrassing enough, while taking the ball in during the TICWSS Homecoming game, girls in the Jungle pulled on the back of her shorts. She saw the drawstring of her shorts hanging out the back. Yet again Silvernail had put her uniform on backwards, getting well earned "Rookie" comments from the team. After being switched out, she laughed her way off the court and into the locker room for a quick change.

Bowling Champs

After three consecutive state titles, the Tecumseh Varsity Girls bowling team was defeated in the semifinals of the state competition on Friday, March 4. Both girls' and boys' varsity qualified at regionals to continue onto the state finals. After a qualifying block consisting of 8 baker games and 2 individual, the boys team missed the cut by 202 pins. The girls moved on to match play after qualifying 5th with a grand total of 3282.

In the quarterfinals, Tecumseh was paired up against Warren Regina. They came out strong, and did not give Regina the chance to get ahead, posting baker games of 167 and 202 and a team total of 933. Tecumseh defeated Regina by 84 pins, moving them onto the semifinals, where they met up with Charlotte. Tecumseh got off to a slow start, only able to shoot baker games of 163 and 179. Down by 101 pins, the girls knew they needed to pull together as a team if they wanted to defend their title. One individual game was between going home empty handed or with the title.

Sometimes the pins do not fall your way. Tecumseh girls were faced with smash ten pins, ringing four pins, and nasty splits. Unable to get ahead, the girls put up a great fight and never gave up. Shooting 921, THS was unable to top the 100-pin deficit they had tallied up early on in the match.

Charlotte, who posted a team total of 998, closed out their semifinal win by 178 pins.

As well as both the girls and boys team making it to the team state finals, Tecumseh was well represented on the individual side. Four bowlers qualified in the top ten at Regionals. The previous two years, on the girls side, Tawni Vollmer and Kara Richard were able to bring home a state title on the individual side. This year, unfortunately, the bowlers did not snatch a title in this competition. Andrew Sokol, Haley Richard, Jordan Richard, and Tawni Vollmer were the bowlers who competed on the individual side.

Swimmin' Circles

The combination of hard work and three-hour practices were part of the reason that many members of the boys' swimming team made it to the state finals. The coach for the boys swimming team was Coach Wolfe. The swimmers say that Coach Wolfe was a great motivator. She was very encouraging, and some of the swimmers wouldn't know what to do without her. To be a swimmer anywhere it takes hard work, but to be a swimmer at Tecumseh High School takes even harder work. The boys swam for miles over the winter tirelessly working to improve.

For a few students, this was their first year in swimming, and they were lucky enough to be able to go to state. Sophomore Jacob Kimerer said, "My team means a lot to me, they were very encouraging and supportive the whole season." The swim team was one of the most closely-knit teams at THS, even going as far as bleaching their hair the same color to show team spirit, an annual tradition.

Near the end of the season, the swimmers started tapering. This means they swim for longer amounts of time, but it is not nearly as vigorous. It gives the swimmers' muscles a break, allows the swimmers to recover from the season of hard practices, and leaves them prepared for the most important competitions.

Season Summary

Though the team had often reached the highest levels of competition in the past, this year the team was unable to win another district title, but the team battled hard and had a great time together. "We really try to work together, and we get along great," said Ashley O'Leary. With endless practices, several doubleheaders, and team bonding, it is not hard to see how the team was able to keep up its chemistry.

The team maintained an exceptional record during this season, finishing at 32-2-1. They remained undefeated for twenty games. Courtney LaVoy had an incredible batting average of .559 and broke the previously held record of hits with seventy-one this season. Emily Maves pitched ten games and won each one. Ali Watson and Bailey Crots pitched fifteen and nine games respectively, and they only had one loss each.

Theme Practice

Shortly before districts, a well-loved theme practice was held. Half of the team arrived as robots, and the other half appeared as pirates. "Theme practices help us relieve pressure before big games like districts," said Melissa Felkey, a varsity veteran. And it is easy for the team to do so with fun, lightly competitive but relevant games, and friendly competition between robots and pirates.

Girls and Boys Track and Field

1. Nathan Kossey races toward the finish line after landing the final hurdle. 2. Karlie Wright throws her arms into the air as she jumps into the long jump pit. 3. Alexi Schnur exhibits perfect form in her relay. 4. Sage Rebottaro races forward after the hand off. 5. Drew Grimm explodes out of the blocks. 6. Brandon Derby easily clears height in pole vault. 7. Marlene Kelley stays strong as the finish line comes into sight.

Staying on Track Working Hard and

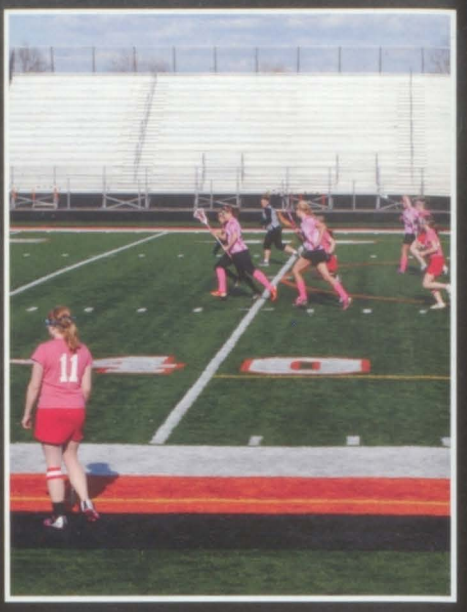
The girls' track team's numbers were greatly reduced this year. Many past participants opted to join soccer instead, and injuries/illness kept some of the team's best runners out of races. Star sprinter Karlie Wright was in and out of the hospital for the entire season for various medical problems including a blood infection and an emergency appendectomy. Senior sprinter Courtney Hong was also forced to sit out of some practices due to a pre-existing leg condition. However, the girls took the setbacks as an opportunity to better the chemistry of the team. They were very close and supportive. Whenever one of the girls was running in an event, they could count on their teammates to be at the corners cheering them on. Especially Marlene Kelley who would scream, "Go Girl! You're so fast I can't even see you! Where are you!?!?" This support is what motivated the girls to greatly improve their times and grow as individuals, even if the low numbers on the team did not allow for many wins.

They were even able to send one girl, Erica Steuwe, to states for her outstanding mile time. The boys were also fired up about their season. They were constantly putting their Facebook statuses as things like, "23 day of track! OHH Yeah!" Coach Mensing also worked to motivate them by pitting the guys against each other and occasionally offering to buy the winner ice cream. The shot put guys also supported the team by offering shelter from the weather in their tent and grilling hot dogs and steaks.

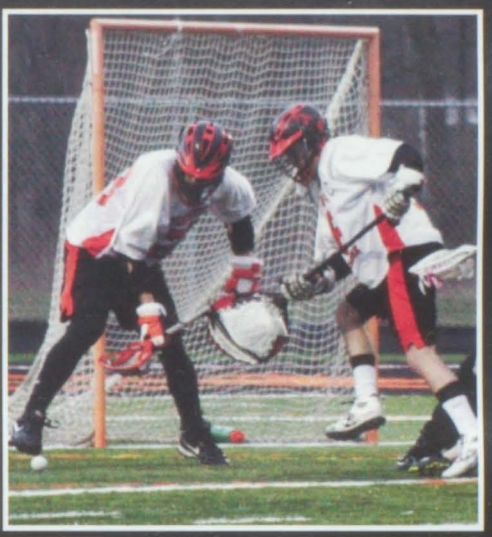
Lady Lacrosse

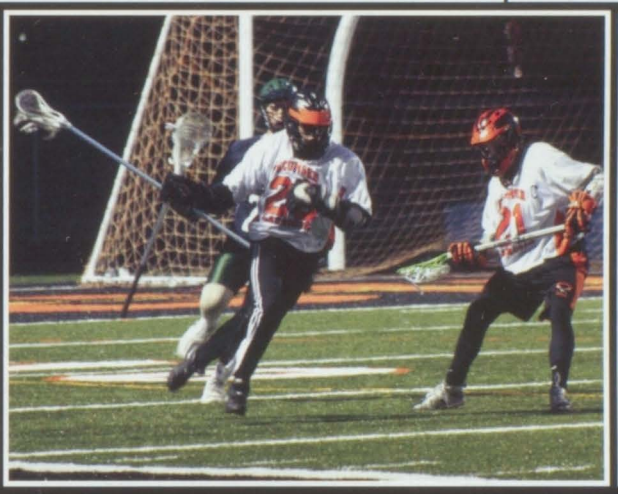
Girls' Varsity Lacrosse had a memorable 2011 season, with wins and losses the girls stuck together through thick and thin. Starting off the season with a team of 30 girls and a brand new coach (Heather Lemon), they accepted the challenge and took it at full force. Varsity Lacrosse headed out for their first game against Salem Rocks with confidence. In "perfect" weather, with freezing rain and thirty-degree temperatures, they defeated Salem. They continued to play game after game. Although they had a losing season, the girls made the best of it by having fun and celebrating as if they had won. The girls made friends and memories they will long remember.

The lacrosse team dinners always turned into something with the freshmen. Anne Mammel's team dinner became interesting when the freshmen decided to start dressing up in the clothes from Mammel's daycare. They became Power Rangers and firefighters. Once dressed, they decided to take it to the streets and dance on the side of Occidental Hwy. and put on a show for the passing cars. The next day Varsity Lacrosse had their 1st annual Pink-Out game. They came to school dressed in neon pink tie-dye shirts, shorts, and neon pink high socks. Beating Bedford and fighting cancer, the girls' confidence was again boosted heading into the second annual Tecumseh Lacrosse Tournament, almost tying against much higher-ranked Grosse Point (6-7) and beating Brighton (2-1). They went into another state-wide tournament with even more confidence. They were devastated after a loss to Saline, and the girls headed home on the bus. While on the bus the girls decided to play a game of pterodactyl, the original game started with Junior Anne Mammel, Sophomore Sydney Burr and Senior Emily Kennedy. However, it slowly escalated to the whole bus playing; everyone got into it and forgot the disappointment of the loss. Bus rides became some of the best parts of the season. At the final Varsity game against Mercy High School, the bus driver allowed the girls to listen to their favorite music, although it was hot and rainy the girls danced the two hour bus ride away. After the game the girls continued the party by dancing and taking pictures with their friends. They then decided to sign each others' legs to commemorate the memories with comrades. Girls' Lacrosse will always remember the 2011 season, filled with wins, losses, memories... and pterodactyl.



Chillin' with The Lacrosse Bros





Season Summary

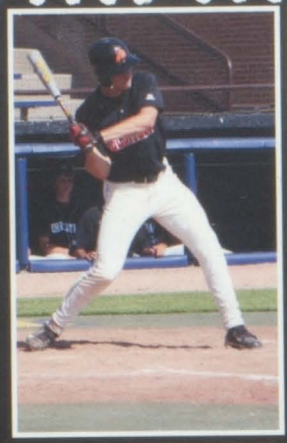
Lacrosse is at once pure skill and endurance. While lacrosse has remained the same over the years, one thing came to the sport: brotherhood. "Lax bros" are defined as any male who plays lacrosse. They live to play lacrosse. Their vocabulary consists of, but is not limited to: word, bro, gnarly, stoked, flow, etc. Lacrosse has taken on its own culture, and Tecumseh had fully embraced it, wearing lax pennies on game days and speaking the vocabulary, even thinking on the field, "Did that chick see me score? Can I get her number?" or "Who can I slash next?"

The team had a few odd traditions in the 2011 season. They black-out painted their faces. Senior Jacob Goudy had one of the most memorable with a joker face for Senior Night. Other honorable mentions were Senior Tom Carney's curly Q 'stache that appeared at almost every game, and Senior Alex Baker's camo face paint. Another weird tradition was a certain song the boys liked to sing toward a JV player's mother, "Kimerer's mom has got it going on!" The boys powered through a tough season with each other by having fun and being bros.

Tecumseh boys' lacrosse had reason to be cocky, having one of their best seasons to date, defeating teams they have been working to beat since freshman year. Through playing dodge ball at practice and partying with the bros in Petoskey, the team stuck together by bonding and having team dinners. Dominating most of the season, they managed to go to third round of districts, sadly to be defeated by Notre Dame Prep. They also had many impressive games and set a great example for the next Varsity team. With most Seniors, such as Mitch Ringer and Zach Brancheau, going on to college lacrosse, the boys will not be forgotten so easily.

Baseball

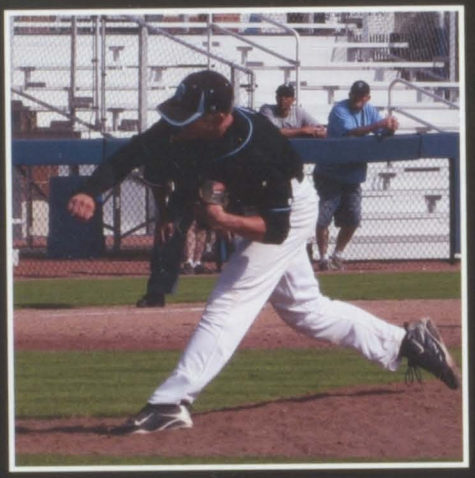
Swingin' for the Bleachers

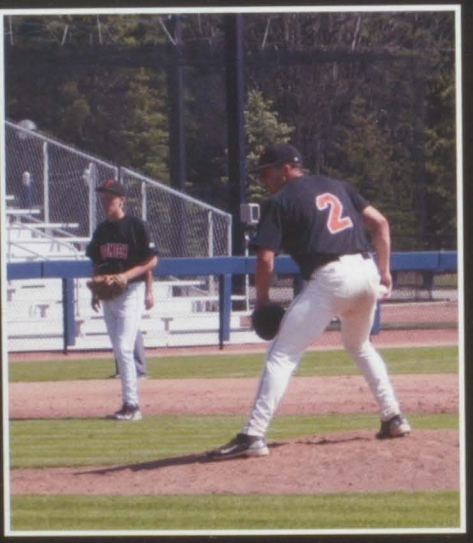


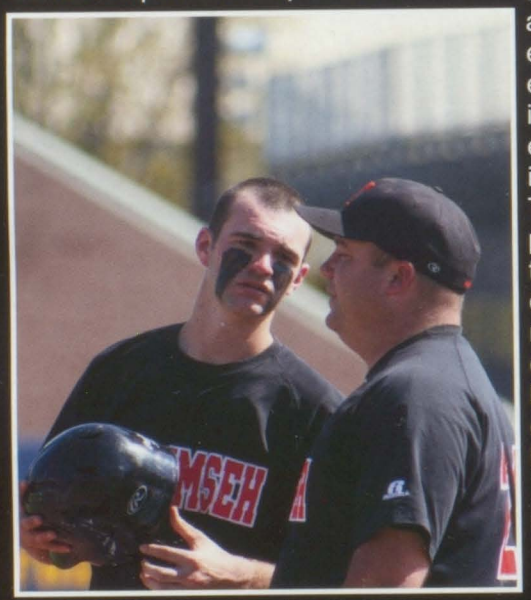
Weathering the Storm

As the school year came to a close and the weather started to warm up (kind of), the Tecumseh Indians Varsity baseball team had an utterly chaotic season. With weather being a major issue for the spring seasons, the Indians had to cancel and rearrange a plethora of games, leaving the schedule in a befuddled muddle. Heavy rainstorms and drastically dismal temperature drops have certainly mixed up every spring sports season, with baseball being no exception.

Baseball has an extra disadvantage when it comes to weather due to the field's vulnerability to floods, thus making practice and/or games impossible for two to three days at a time. Weather is not the only aspect of the pandemonium that was the 2011 baseball season. The games the Indians actually were able to play had an extraordinary sense of excitement involving the final inning. Perhaps the most electrifying facet of baseball is the walk-off home run. There are two sides to this phenomenon: the side every team wants to be on (the dramatic victor) and the side no team ever wishes to endure (the disappointed loser). Tecumseh has been on both sides of this very broad spectrum, with Kyle Hooper being right smack dab in the middle.

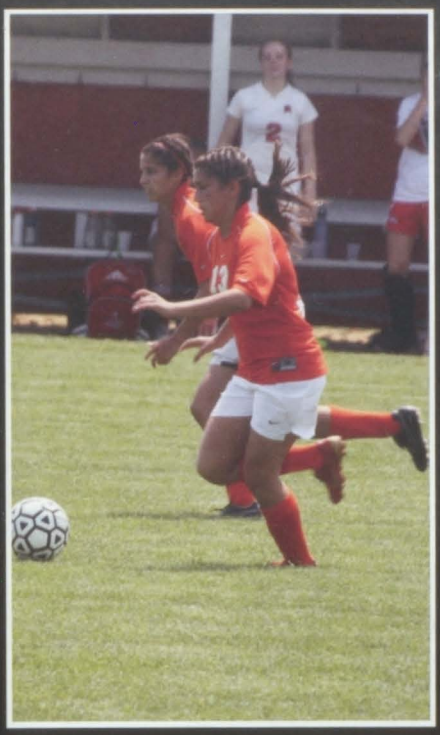






Coach Al Schmidt confers with Kyle Hooper.

Girls Soccer Kicks It Up!



Varsity soccer has had a season to remember, learning new formations and conditioning hard to get ready for games. While some of the team's standout players went off to college last year, it was only an opportunity for the girls to work harder themselves. Although all the girls agreed that there was a definite lack of chemistry from the previous years, they managed to show us otherwise during games. Lacking players made this team one, with girls from freshmen to seniors all playing as the THS varsity team. With some inexperienced players making the team, they had a lot of work on their hands (or feet) before the season's games began. Although the newcomers caught on quickly, the team lacked in the offensive area, "making it a difficult season when it came to winning," said Sophomore Raquel Champion. Luckily the team's defense was stronger, working well together with the help and leadership of Junior Devon Giovannone and Senior Shannon Peake in the defensive zone.

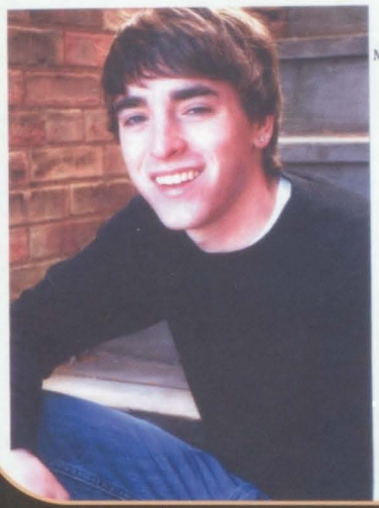
Zack,

Since the day you were born, I thought every stage you went through was the best and so often wished time could have stood still. With each milestone, to the many accomplishments you have had, to making college and career plans, watching you grow just keeps getting better. We are so proud of the young man you have become.

May your future be bright and your life be filled with happiness, love, laughter and much success.

Dream big…Nothing is impossible! We will love & support you always!
Congratulations!



Love,

Mom & John
Brooke

Congratulations
Bradley and Brandon!

We Love You,
Dad and Mom

Dear Kaylene,

How did graduation get here so soon?
My how time flies when you are having fun,
And you sure have been fun!

Papa always called you "something else."
Boy was he right!
I think back to the little girl who told her kindergarten teacher she could Irish dance then showed the class.
That was two years before you even had a lesson!
I could go on and on with examples like this.
They only prove that you will become whatever you set your sights on.

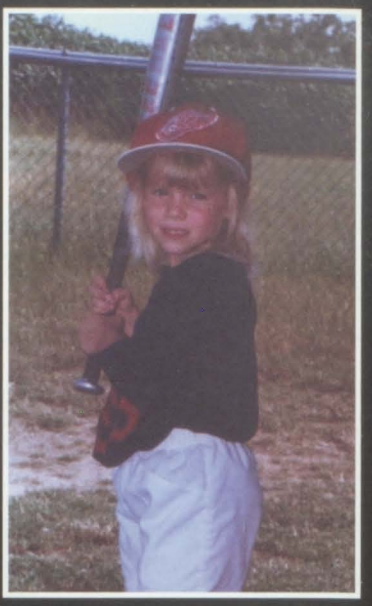
Your dad always called you "our little princess."
Imagine our pride and joy when you became "the queen."
We are so proud of the young lady you have become.
You have stayed true to yourself and strong in your faith.

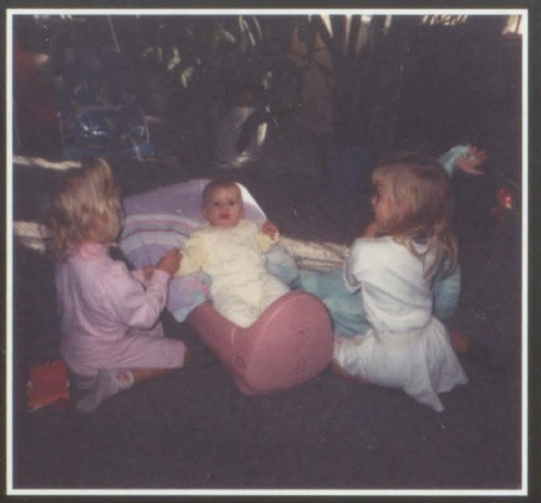
Our wish for you is an Irish Blessing:
May you always have walls for the wind,
A roof for the rain,
Tea beside the fire,
Laughter to cheer you,
Those you love near you,
And all your heart might desire.

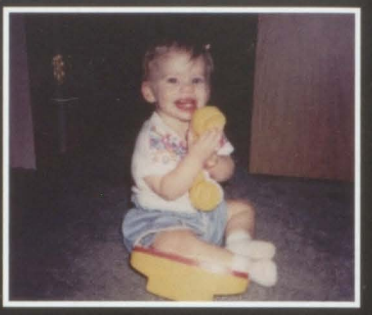
May you continue to grow in character and faith.
And remember KK, we love you more!
Mom and Dad

P.S. Thank you for being the perfect little sister. I guess I am glad we didn't give you back to the Indians! Love - William

Go Get 'em Tank!







Ashley,

It's hard to believe you are graduating. You are truly beautiful, and not just on the outside, but on the inside where it really counts. The first chapter of your life has been filled with many days on a softball field. Who would have thought you would learn so many life lessons on a softball field?

- You've learned the importance of practice. You learned to do anything well you have to keep trying. Sometimes over and over again.
- You learned patience. You learned to accept every teammate and coach to make a real team.
- You learned the true meaning of hard work. You learned that in order to improve your skills, you have to put in more effort.
- You learned the true meaning of family. You saw that we were always there (at least one of us) to pick you up after a bad game or to celebrate with you after a great one.
- You learned what it means to make a commitment. You've had some good and bad teams, coaches, and days, but you never let it stop you. You always kept going.
- You learned humility. I saw you grow into a very accomplished player, but you also learned there is always someone who has a chance to be better, whether it be on a softball field, in a job, or with classmates.

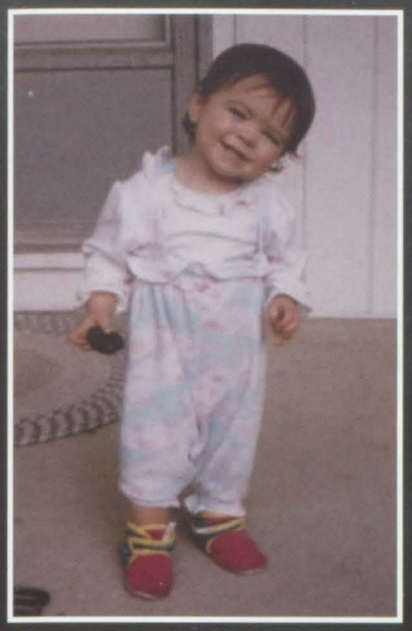
There are so many other lessons you have already learned, there are just too many to mention. I know as the next chapter of your life begins, you will take these lessons with you as a foundation. From that foundation, I know you will continue to grow and make a big difference in the path you choose and to everyone around you.

Love,
Mom, Dad, & Allie

Sisterly Love

Ash- Here is a saying that always helped me if I was stuck on something in school: Nothing improves creativity like a lack of adult supervision. College is a blast, enjoy it!
Love, Lys

Dear Ashley,
I am so proud of you! Congrats on graduating and good luck in college (even though you probably won't need it . . .
Miss 4.061 GPA!)
Love, Amanda



Shannon,

We've so enjoyed watching you grow into the fine young woman that you are today. This successful milestone is one of many in your journey of life. We look forward to sharing many more milestones with you. We will always love and support you! Stay strong in your faith! Congratulations!

Love,

Mom, Dad, Kevin, and Kyle

Dear Dominique,

The time has passed so quickly. Here you are graduating from high school, entering a new chapter in your life. We are so proud of you for all the hard work and effort you've put into these formative years. We know you'll continue to have successes through college and beyond. Even though life will bring some hardships and challenges, please remember we'll always be here for you.

May God continue to bless you!

With much love,

Dad, Mom, David, Tanya, Lara, Lyza, Nate, Danielle, Deanna and Dexy

Taylor,

I am so proud to call you my son.

Make good choices and continue to make me proud.

Don't forget your Grandmas are watching over you.

Stay true to yourself.

Lots of Love,

Mom

Hannah Galloway made the Varsity Volleyball team as a Freshman. Rebecca Nowak took on her biggest role yet in Footloose. Rachel Waite went to State for swimming. Victor Tran managed to draw non-stop while still maintaining excellent grades. Derek Shadley went to District Finals with the Boys' Varsity Soccer team. Kiley Wonderly had a lot of fun cheerleading with everyone at the football games. Paige Watkins made it to State for Golf as an individual competitor. Johanna Seidel enjoyed her three snow days off in a row. Anna Wendt has put in more than 20 hours of community service. Britni Birt is excelling in her Vo-Tech cooking program.
